STRANGE DIARY OF ASSASSIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Extracts from the diary of Fitchugh C. Goldsborough, the musician who fatally shot David Graham Phillips, the author, and then ended his own life, which were made public to-day, following Phillips's death, are believed to furnish the motive for the double tragedy. The diary clearly indicates that Goldsborough was possessed of the idea that Phillips was pursuing him with the intent of doing him bodily arm. One passage in the diary shows that the musician thought the author's sister had been flirting with him.

The entries, written in a nervous hand lend the officials of the District Attorney's office to believe that Goldsborough was obsessed with the idea that Mr. Phillips was a "vampire," drawing the inspiration for his writings, as well as the plots themselves, from the brain of the madman Goldsborough.

They believe that Goldsborough conceived the idea from witnessing the play "The Vampire," which appeared here last year, and in which a writer was portrayed as feeding upon the brilliant thoughts of a younger man and using them as his own. Evidently this was the crack-brained belief Goldsborough entertained about Mr. Phillips.

Efforts at Poetry.

In the diary also there are many weak efforts at original poetry and prose, at tempted by Goldsborough several months ago. In many places the pages are splashed and blotted by ink. Often the entries are difficult to read, but enough was legible to lead the authorities to believe that the violinist had been laboring for nearly a year under the impression that he and Mr. Phillips were rivals, that he was in constant danger of being attacked by the novelist, and that the latter had even gone so far at times as to set spies upon his trail. One of these spies, Goldsborough wrote, looked not unlike Ribert Adamson, the Mayor's secretary.

The first entries concern what Goldsborough in his insane way of reasoning believed to have been a connection between himself and a woman he saw through a window in the second story of the National Arts Club, not the floor on which Mr. Phillips lived. Several pages are taken up by a recital of what Goldsborough imagined to have passed between himself and the woman. At the time these entries were apparently made Goldsborough was living at No. 6 Gramercy Place, for on the cover of the well-thumbed notebook this address was written just below Goldsborough's name in full.

About Flirting.

This first entry is under date of June 11, 1910. It says: —

Certain happenings recently led me to think it advisable to jot down data. I believe David Graham Phillips is trying to take a case against me or do me serious bodily harm, or both. Yesterday afternoon—I think about 5 o'clock—I was sitting in my window, when I noticed a pretty looking woman seated at a second story of the Art Society Building. This woman was about twenty years old, or a little more, I should say, and had a large bust with flowers around it. She smiled over at me in a pointed manner, and on first catching sight of me lifted her hand and waved it. I could not decide whether this was an involuntary motion of interest on seeing me or was meant as a sign of encouragement for

GIULIA MOROSINI WERNER, VICTIM OF $60,000 VANDALISM

LOOT PALACE OF MOROSINI

NEW YORK, Jan. 5.—"Elmhurst," the wonder palace at Riverdale-on-the-Hudson, and sometimes a house of mystery during the Hattie of Giovanni P. Morosini, was visited by vandals during the housemoon trip of its chatelaine, who was Miss Giulia Morosini.

Miss Morosini, who was known as the best dressed woman in America, was married on January 12 to Arthur M. Werner, a former policeman, who saved her life while he was seering as a mounted officer on the speedway. Mr. and Mrs. Werner left immediately after the ceremony for a fortnight's journey in the South.

For years the house has been carefully guarded by private watchmen, and the grounds guarded by dogs. In addition there was a deadly electric circuit when was employed at night to protect the store of treasures in the rooms on the main floor of the house. Werner was employed as superintendent of the place as a reward for his gallantry in rescuing Miss Morosini from peril and also because of his police training. His wife obtained a divorce from him, and after the death of the wealthy banker, Werner assumed the charge of the estate. When he married Miss Morosini and left on his honeymoon trip his last duty was to see that the house would be amply protected during his absence.

Hats and Gowns Slashed.

To-day when they entered the house, which had been closed and guarded during their absence, they received a first impression that it had been ransacked by burglars.

Drawing room, library, and the celebrated armory, a 100-foot wing of the house which contains the greatest private collection of arms and armor in this country, if not in the world, were turned upside down, tapestries, as though a cyclone had swept through them. Figures were overturned, rugs trampled and torn, and the celebrated Gobelin tapestries ripped down and mutilated.

In Mrs. Werner's apartments the scene of ruin was more complete than on the first floor. Some of her most treasured possessions had been scattered about, her closets, which contained her magnificent gowns and hats upon which she had spent a large fortune, had been forced open. There, finery had been ripped from hooks and torn from closets and boxes and slashed or torn into ribbons.

Damage Beyond Repair.

Mr. Werner went through the rooms which he had left but two weeks ago, rich in treasures from all parts of the world, and especially in the art of Venice of the middle ages, and made a mental inventory. To his great surprise he failed to note any of the chief objects missing, and when he heard his wife's report he decided that it was vandalism rather than burglary that they had to deal with.

Several articles of value, notably some gifts from Mrs. Werner to her husband before their marriage, were missing, and this added a more puzzling feature to the strange situation to the doubly guarded palace, but it enabled Werner to call the police to his aid by making a confidential report of a burglary. The articles missing and the destruction of Mrs. Werner's wardrobe, the smashing of the old silver plate, the tripping up of rugs and tapestries and other acts of vandalism will entail a loss of $60,000 to Mrs. Werner.

ELECTRIC SIGNS IN BOSTON

Boston is rapidly becoming the largest Electric Sign advertising center in the world. Electric Signs are now recognized as the most effective and cheapest form of advertising. In fact evidenced by the great number now in operation in New York and Boston alone.

Boston prides itself on having the most complete and up-to-date factory in the country for turning out this work, and even now Electric Signs designed and manufactured in this city by the American Electric Sign Co. Inc., are to be seen in almost every part of the world.

To make the streets of Greater Boston brighter, this enterprising Sign Co., Inc., has agreed to erect Electric Signs in the city at a very low cost, and also has inaugurated a rental system by which merchants and advertisers can have Signs erected and maintained for a certain period. See

LODGE TO QUIT AS SENATOR

The Worcester Evening Post printed yesterday the following dispatch from its Washington correspondent:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 24.—The Worcester Evening Post may state to-day on what is regarded as the very best of authority that United States Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, recently re-elected, and as he himself believes vindicated before the people, will shortly resign his seat and accept an appointment from President William Howard Taft as Ambassador to England.

The Post's informant adds that it would not be surprising any day now to hear of the appointment being sent by Mr. Taft to the Senate for confirmation.

It is a well-known fact that Senator Lodge, having seen eighteen years of service in the upper branch of Congress, desires to round out his career in the diplomatic service, and that he has long cherished the idea of being sent to the court of St. James.

Mr. Lodge's apparent gratification over his recent re-election, somewhat surprising because of the narrow margin by which he won, his close friends say was due to the fact that he regarded it as a clear vindication of his acts in the past, and that with that vindication he could fittingly continue in public life.

President Taft is known to regard Senator Lodge, as others do, as one of the ablest men in the land and one who, because of peculiar qualities, should become most eminent in the diplomatic service.

That Senator Lodge will receive the appointment soon and resign his seat is regarded as logical, because in case of a vacancy in the Massachusetts delegation before the end of the present Congress a new election by the State legislature would be in order.

If the Senator should prolong his term beyond the time of adjournment of Congress, say until June, Governor Eugene N. Foss would have the power to appoint a successor ad interim.

And naturally it is not supposed that Mr. Lodge would be agreeable to placing that power in the hands of Mr. Foss.

ACCEPTS HUGE SHIP FOR BOSTON SERVICE

The Boston office of the Cunard Steamship Company to-day received cable advices that the new 18,000-ton passenger steamship Franconia, the second largest vessel launched in England, has been accepted. She will be used in the Boston, Queenstown and Liverpool service during the Summer months, making her maiden trip May 2. The Franconia will be the largest steamship that ever visited this city, being 625 feet long, with a 72-foot beam. She is a twin-screw boat, with two funnels, and is fitted out with wireless, submarine signalling apparatus, watertight bulkheads and bilge keels for steadiness.

5,000 IMPERILLED BY YOUNG PYROMANIAC

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—That the lives of 5,000 persons have been imperilled by a seventeen-year-old pyromaniac was revealed to-day when Frederick Burkhardt, a delivery boy, admitted that he had been responsible for a number of fires in Brooklyn. Burkhardt was arrested, charged with arson, the specific case against him being the starting on fire of the Hopedale No. 317 Throop avenue, Brooklyn, early to-day. Forty persons were driven in panic into the street. "I just wanted to see one real big fire," declared Burkhardt. "If the first fire I had started had been a big one I would have quit then. I certainly do like to see them engines go to a fire."

ABSENT-MINDEDNESS NEARLY COSTS LIFE

Genaro Leane, twenty-nine years old, living at No. 12 Hale street, West End, came near ending his earthly career early to-day when he accidentally turned on the gas and climbed into bed. He was found an hour later in a semi-conscious condition and was hurried to the Relief Hospital, suffering from gas poisoning. Leane told he went to extinguish the light in the room and absent-mindedly opened the gas cock regulating the supply of a heater. His condition is not serious.

OIL STEAMER GOES AGROUND AT BEVERLY

The 300-foot oil steamer Ligeonier, belonging to the Duffy Oil Company of Beverly, went aground in Beverly Harbor, near Salem Willows, early to-day while being towed in by three tugs. She is not in any great danger and will probably be able to get off at high tide. The steamer came from Port Arthur, Texas, with tanks filled with oil and a cargo of barrels. The plant in Beverly is the eastern distributing point of the company.

2 ROBBER SUSPECTS CAPTURED

Two men were captured by the Cambridge police early to-day after a chase over Somerville, in which one of the two jumped from atop the roof of a house to the street, almost landing on a policeman.

The two men were Charles Crowley, twenty years old, of No. 60 Sixth street, and Michael Murphy, twenty-three, of No. 2 H street, East Cambridge. They were charged with robbing the jewelry store of James T. Rice, at the corner of Fifth and Cambridge streets.

After the capture Murphy's house was searched. A valuable collection of jewelry was found there. The police found twenty-two watches, five stickpins, three watch fobs, three chains, two gold lockets and a silver locket.

The robbers were discovered by P. J. Cooney, who saw them in the jewelry store at 1 a. m. He telephoned the police. A squad of patrolmen was sent to the scene. As they came near the store a man was seen to dash out of an alleyway near the store. They searched the houses in the locality. Finally they went to the roof of one house. Crowley was seen several houses away, concealed on the roof of Murphy's house. The police started across the roofs after him. Murphy, who had not been seen up to this time, suddenly appeared from behind a chimney, dashed to the edge of the roof and jumped to the street.

NEWTON BOY NEAR DEATH FROM BURNS

Little Emery Jenson, Jr., the three-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Emery Jenson who reside on the estate of Dr. Stone at No. 131 Brenon street, Newton, was fearfully burned this morning as a result of playing with matches. His mother succeeded in extinguishing the flames that ignited his clothing, by wrapping a blanket about the child's body, but not until several burns had been inflicted. The boy was rushed to the Newton Hospital by order of Dr. Stone, and there he is on the dangerous list.

DRIVER INJURED IN RUNAWAY ACCIDENT

It became known to-day that Albert Madden of No. 225 Washington street, Dorchester, was badly hurt yesterday afternoon on Billings road, Norfolk Downs, when the horse attached to the grocery wagon he drives for Tiberiake & Small of Neponset ran away. Madden was thrown under the wagon which passed over him. His nose and a rib were fractured and his jaw dislocated. Dr. Frederick Bartlett rendered emergency treatment and took Madden home in his automobile.

Peary, Baron Hulot, secretary of the Geographical Society, states that that society has paid no official honor to the American because of a flight rule which compels the presentation of proof. The secretary added that a majority of the members of the society personally were convinced that Peary reached the North Pole, and "if Peary wishes to bring proof the society will receive it with open arms."

MILFORD, Jan. 25.—Fire in the Venetian palace on Adin road, Hopedale, which is owned by Chas. Hill Draper, a relative of former Governor Draper, was first reached by the Milford department, because the Hopedale firemen could not be reached by telephone. The Milford firefighters got word first because an office boy in the Draper Company office did not know how to summon the Hopedale men. The damage was slight.

BIG BILL KELIHER, FIGHTING TO-DAY TO ESCAPE PRISON

WILLIAM J. KELIHER

FIGHT ONE-WAY DEVONSHIRE ST.

Men representing important business enterprises appeared to-day before the Street Commissioners in opposition to the suggestion that Devonshire should be made a one-way street. The Boston Globe said that it would cost them $250,000 if the change were made and other concerns made like statements.

There was no one at the meeting who advocated the change. While the commissioners reserved their decision, it is believed that in view of the representations made the plan will be abandoned.

J. Richard Carter of Carter Rice & Co., said that it would be a physical impossibility for his concern to do business if it were not permitted to load and unload teams between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. He said they would be obliged to move, at a cost of $25,000 and rent inconvenience, and he believed that to obstruct a rent business where no public benefit was ensured was unwise. He said that in his twenty-five years of business in Devonshire street from Milk to Summer.

Junius T. Auetbach, representing the AMERICAN, pointed out the inconvenience that would be suffered by business concerns on the lower end of Devonshire street by making the thoroughfare a restricted one, and said that there was little or no complaint over congestion or blockades at this point.

Thomas Downey, representing the Globe, said that newspaper would be obliged to move if the change went into effect and would be obliged to make an expenditure of nearly a quarter of a million of dollars.

Edward J. Sampson, an expressman, and Arthur L. Hobson also enter objection to the proposed change.

On the matter of making Friend street, from Union to Hanover, a one-way street, Morton Felton, Moses A. Cowes, W. E. Loring, Joseph A. Maynard and Brown & Flanders advocated such a change and nobody appeared to oppose it. The Street Commissioners will make it a one-way thoroughfare.

One slight objection was made to the proposition of closing Dorchester avenue from Broadway to A street between the hours of 5 and 6:30 P. M. This change will relieve the danger at the Broadway and Dorchester avenue crossing, where many accidents have occurred recently. Both of the traffic patrolmen at this point advocated the change.

NEW TRIAL ASKED FOR "BIG BILL"

Lawyers for William J. ("Big Bill") Keliher to-day began their arguments for a new trial for their client before the full bench of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. To-day's effort is the final one to save "Big Bill" from an eighteen-year term in Charlestown State prison, to which he has been sentenced for hiving helped George W. Coleman to wreck the National City Bank of Cambridge.

DEFENCE'S ARGUMENT FOR A NEW TRIAL.

The case did not begin until 11 45, owing to the continuance from yesterday, and the courtroom was crowded. Attorneys Harvey H. Pratt and Daniel H. Coakley appeared for "Big Bill." Keliher was not in court when Attorney Pratt began his argument. Attorney Pratt read from the Keliher brief, filed yesterday, which is in book form and contains ninety-seven pages.

Judges Putnam, Colt and Lowell followed him closely with the aid of copies which they had.

Attorney Pratt started at once to review the evidence and tell the story of Coleman's stealings, his subsequent meeting with the fake players and later his meeting with Keliher. After telling this story he read the thirty-one points cited in the brief as reasons why a new trial for Keliher should be granted.

The two principal things upon which the defence claims a new trial should be granted are exceptions taken to testimony that was admitted during the trial and the vagueness of the indictment under which Keliher was tried.

Attack Bill of Indictment.

The defence claims that the indictment was vague, illogical and did not clearly state any offence known to law. There are several specifications under this claim.

The most important evidence that was objected to by the lawyers for Keliher is that given by Coleman and Wilson W. Lockhart. Lockhart was Coleman's right hand man, who run his automobile, did errands for him, substituted for him at the bank and cashed the checks by which Coleman secured the funds of the bank.

Keliher's lawyers object generally to the swearing as witnesses of both Coleman and Lockhart and then specifically on certain parts of the evidence that they gave. Coleman's evidence was objected to as a whole.

That part of Lockhart's testimony that is particularly objected to by Keliher's lawyers is where he testified to an occurrence at Hotel Belmont in New York. He swore that he saw Coleman hand Keliher a big roll of bills and say at the same time:

"There goes three thousand."

District's Attorney's Argument.

Other exceptions were taken during the trial to Judge Hale's exclusion of certain evidence offered by the defence. This evidence was offered to place the responsibility for the loss of the funds of Coleman's thefts on Cashier Earl of the bank. It was excluded by Judge Hale. A piece of evidence in this connection that is specified in the brief is that of Cashier Earl of Rowe. Testimony from his to the effect that he told Cashier Earl and other bank officials that Coleman was leading a wild life far beyond his means, was offered by the defence, but excluded. Other exceptions are based on Judge Hale's charge to the jury.

The government is represented to-day by District Attorney Asa P. French and his assistant, William H. Garland. When Attorney Pratt finished his argument District Attorney French arose and gave his argument from the brief submitted for the government. This brief covers sixty seven pages.

FRAUD NOTES IN WILL CASE

An itinerant penman, such as one sees on the streets writing cards, figured in an important way in a suit to-day in which it was charged that John F. Green of Lowell tried to fraudulently obtain along $15,000 of the estate of the late "Stonewall" George Green ekity, a well-known character of Dracut.

The case was before Judge Hitchcock of the Equity Sessions of the Superior Court. The plaintiff was Mrs. Mary C. Leach, a daughterkter of Kelly, to whom he left practically all of his property, amounting to $60,000. Green was a cousin of Kelly and Kelly lived with Green.

The reading of the will was a great shock to Green. He expected more than he got. Then he turned up what purported to be notes that he held of Kelly's for $15,750, nearly all of which had been made out to Green, and tried to collect. Mrs. Leach declared the notes to be fraudulent.

In the course of the trial a negro took the stand. He said that his name was "Professor Joseph Coates." He was an expert penman, he explained. The question able notes were handed to him.

"Did you do any of the writing on these notes?" he was asked.

"Yes," replied the witness. "I wrote the body of the notes."

Professional handwriting experts testified that the signatures were not in the handwriting of Kelly, and Judge Hitchcock decided that the notes were invalid.

28 LODGERS ROUTED BY FIRE

Twenty-eight lodgers in the two lodging houses at Nos. 153-155 Warren avenue, South End, were driven from their rooms early to-day by fire which started on the third floor of No. 153 and in its way through into the next house. The cause of the fire is not definitely known, but as it started between the partitions it is believed to have been caused by rats gnawing at matches.

The fire caused $1,200 damage. Everything burned was insured.

The fire was discovered by someone passing the house numbered 155. The man rang the bell and told Mrs. A. M. Thomas, proprietor of the lodging house, that her home was burning. She ran upstairs and found the room of Thomas Martin in flames. Two lodgers, C. W. Thomas and Carl Leightsinger, in an adjoining room, were asleep at the time. Mrs. Thomas awakened them. She then went through the house and alarmed the other thirteen lodgers.

From the room on the top floor of No. 153 the fire ate its way through to the top floor of No. 155 and into the room occupied by George Wolpers. He was just getting up from bed when he saw the flames coming through the wall. He rushed through the house and notified the thirteen people in that house. They all fled to the first floor, where they waited for the firemen.

The man who notified Mrs. Thomas that her home was on fire went to the nearest fire engine house and told of the fire. A chemical was sent to the place and the fire was extinguished.

BLAZE ROUTS 16 BOARDERS

MARLBORO, Jan. 25.—Fire early to-day partly destroyed the three-story boarding house on Liberty street conducted by Michael John and George Elfridis. One man was found unconscious in the building after the fire was out. Sixteen lodgers fled from the building in their night clothes when the flames were discovered, and seven of them were cut in forcing their way through a window on the first floor.

The fire started on the first floor of the building and was discovered at 2:30 o'clock. All of the lodgers slept on the second and third floors. The alarm was given and they rushed from their rooms to the street. On the first floor they found the door locked. Antonio Scuritis, who led the flight, jumped through a window. His hands and legs were cut. Seven others who followed were cut on the hands by the jagged glass.

Alexander Petlis, one of the first to escape from the building, rushed back to get his money. The searchers found him unconscious under the bed in his room.

The loss from the fire will exceed $4,000. Several of the lodgers lost sums of money. The origin of the fire is not known. The proprietors believe that it was caused by a cigarette.

COATMAKERS WILL FIGHT INJUNCTION

It was announced to-day that the executive council of the striking Rhodesia coatmakers' union will oppose the application for an injunction against them asked by the Sisson Manufacturing Company. The hearing is set for Wednesday, and Attorney William Schorton has been retained to fight the application. The Garment Workers' District Council to-day sent word that the union endorsed the strike. Word has been received from the Penn Makers' Union that an assessment of 50 cents a week from each member will be collected. The application for an injunction was asked for yesterday afternoon, naming Barney Kaiser, president of the union; Agnes Dempsey, secretary of the union; Abraham Lundgeld and Louis Dobrowsky. It alleges that the strike was called to make the factory a closed shop.

GOV. GLADSTONE'S ACT IS RESENTED

LONDON, Jan. 25.—Great resentment has been aroused in Rhodesia and South Africa generally, according to dispatches received here, because the governor, Viscount Gladstone, has commuted the death sentence passed on a native for an attack on a white woman. Cases of protest have been held in Bulawayo and elsewhere. Prominent men connected with Rhodesia but living in England, declare that as there are barely 20,000 Europeans in Rhodesia to 600,000 natives it is plainly indispensable that capital punishment in such cases should be carried out.

ACCUSES FIREMEN OF CURSING HIM

The board of control decides to-day whether a member of the Chelsea Fire Department shall lose his job on the charge of having made the following remark to the family of Michael Brown, of No. 61 Williams street, Chelsea, during a recent fire: "You Jews—you fire makers—get out of the way." According to Brown, he and his son were watching a fire at No. 65 Williams street from their porch when a fireman made the foregoing remark and knocked the boy down, and cursed both

GEESE FORETELL EARLY SPRING

Honk! Honk! These are no blasts from an auto horn. Wild geese are telling folks that Old Man Winter has received word from headquarters to get ready to pack up and take a long vacation. The geese, several hundred of them in one flock, early today made their first return flight over Boston this season. Headed by the wise old boss gander, and the usual V shaped formation they took when migrating, they flew high for the North, following the course of the Charles River. Not for years have the geese made their flight from the Southern feeding grounds so early in the season. Passengers on the electric cars from Cambridge noticed the flock and became interested at once. That birds are good weather prophets is accepted by the majority of folks, and when they fly North thus early it is regarded as a sure sign of early Spring.

At the same time wise folk recall that the advance agent always travels some distance ahead of the show and that it is yet too soon to discard furs and overcoats and overshoes.

SLEEPWALKER FALLS, MAY DIE

John Barrus, while walking in his sleep from a third-story window of his home at No. 38 A street, South Boston, early to-day and was injured probably fatally. He was taken to the City Hospital with a fractured skull and possible internal injuries.

For some time Barrus has been walking in his sleep, and the other members of his family have kept a close watch upon him during the night. He slept in a room on the third floor, and it is believed that while in a somnambulistic state, opened the window, climbed out on the sill, and stepping off into space dropped thirty feet to the sidewalk.

A young man on the opposite side of the street saw him fall and rushed to his assistance, and called an ambulance.

CARMEN FOR LAST TIME TO-NIGHT

The fourth and last performance of "Carmen," with the passionate and vivacious Maria Gay in the title role, takes place at the Opera House to-night. It will also be the last opportunity to see Zenatello in his favorite part of Don Jose. The two artists finish their engagement with the Boston company with the "Aida" performance of Saturday afternoon, and will not be heard in Boston again until next season. Their places will be filled by artists from the Metropolitan Opera Company. George Baklanoff will sing Escamillo, the bull fighter, to-night, and Alice Nielsen will sing Micaela, and the remainder of the cast will be the same as at all previous performances.

A Mystery Solved

For years medical men have been seeking a cure for eczema, the most common and most stubborn of skin diseases. Some said it was a blood disease; some said it was the result of indigestion. It remained for one studious chemist to settle beyond any question that eczema in many forms is a skin disease and related in no way to a disordered condition of the blood. This same chemist experimented with many antiseptic, healing and soothing agents, but it was not until he formed the compound Cadum that he at last realized he had given to the world something that would bring relief to hundreds of sufferers. Cadum ranks to-day with the great remedies of the medical world. Its action is so positive that in five days the itching is stopped at once. People who have itched and scratched for years find sleep and rest soon after Cadum is applied. Cadum is sold by all druggists at 10c & 25c a box. It is for eczema in all its forms, also for pimples, blotches, itch, bitter, scaly skin, eruptions, chafings, psoriasis, rash, sores, scurvy, scabs, itching piles, etc.

MRS. SCHENK WEEPS AT LOVE'S BETRAYAL

WHEELING, W. Va., Jan. 25.—Daniel Phillips, former sweetheart of Mrs. Laura Schenk, was denounced as a traitor to the woman who cared for him when arrangements were resumed to-day.

"This man betrayed and testified against the woman who had lavished money and love on him," declared Attorney Samuel O. Boyce.

Mrs. Schenk came into court on the fifteenth day of her trial looking worn and haggard. The jail officials said she had cried all through the night and had practically no sleep. She said that she was glad that her ordeal was nearly over.

"I am going to be freed," she said, "and then I will go back to my children. Oh, it has been horrible!"

Mr. Boyce said that it would not take him long to conclude and the case will probably go to the jury before night.

For the first time since Judge Jordan issued his order forbidding the attendance of women at the trial a woman was present to-day. She was Miss Annabel Sharp, representing a Cleveland newspaper.

Attorney Boyce said:

"Gentlemen, I say, as every other man in this country who has red blood in his veins would say, that John Schenk has the God given right to kill on sight the spurning worm that betrayed Mrs. Schenk."

"Thank God in Heaven that Daniel Phillips has left this court room, and may Heaven interpose and never allow him to enter Ohio County again."

Mr. Boyce took up the testimony of the chauffeur, Lundy Wilson, ridiculing it and declared that if Mrs. Schenk had been the crafty, deceiving wife that she was pictured by the State, she would not have confided in Wilson.

"If this woman had been guilty of poisoning her husband, why did she not confide that to Wilson?" demanded Mr. Boyce. "According to this chauffeur, she confided her relations with Phillips to him. Would not the other admission have been candor?"

Summing Up by Prosecutor.

Attorney Boyce completed his argument at 10:50 o'clock, when a recess was taken. Mrs. Schenk seemed cheered by the words of her counsel. After the respite Prosecutor Handlan began standing up for the State.

Prosecutor Handlan went into the subject of circumstantial evidence, and as he called many cases where suspected persons were put to death on such proof of guilt Mrs. Schenk visibly weakened. Her counsel feared she was going to swoon, but after a few sips of water she secured control of herself. As the case neared the end the crowd became larger than at any time previous. The corridors of the Court House were so crowded with men and women unable to get into the courtroom that the other legal business was almost at a standstill.

Mrs. Schenk in Tears.

While she was being pictured as a character deserving neither sympathy nor pity by the scathing arraignment of Mr. Handlan, Mrs. Schenk broke down. Her form was shaken with sobs, which could be heard all over the courtroom. The spectator ridiculed the defence's appeal for sympathy, declaring that a woman who would take her young children upon auto trips with Phillips could not ask for pity.

As he pointed his finger at Mrs. Schenk, Mrs. Schenk bowed her head, hiding from the stare of the spectators. When court adjourned for the noon recess the prosecutor was still summing up.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Genuine Merit Required to Win the People's Confidence

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturers. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured, to those who are in need of it.

In an interview on the subject a prominent local druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows immediate results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

A free trial bottle will be sent by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Sold at druggists in bottles of two sizes—50c. and $1.00.

POE MANUSCRIPT IN STEDMAN SALE

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—In the sale of Edmund Clarence Stedman's library and autograph collection were a manuscript and two long letters of Edgar Allen Poe. The manuscript, consisting of sixty-four lines written on a roll and watered, in the manner customary with Poe, for publication, is a denial of the charge brought by Henry B. Hirst, a Philadelphia poet, that Poe, in his well-known poem, "Thalume," plagiarized Keats's "Extinction." Poe labored by accusing Hirst of plagiarizing from "Lenore." G. H. Richmond got it for $365.

BARNES RESIGNS AS SURVEYOR OF PORT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—President Taft to-day received the resignation of William Barnes, Jr., surveyor of the Port of Albany, N. Y. Mr. Barnes resigned so that he can pay more attention to his duties as chairman of the Republican State Committee. A delegation of New York politicians, headed by Colonel M. MARY GARDEN TELLS HOW MRS. EDDY MAY RISE

Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson of New York, in an article entitled "The Demonstration of Mary Baker Eddy," published in the Independent, explains in detail her belief in the resurrection or the "demonstration of life over death or the reappearance of our revered leader, Mary Baker Eddy."

"As I understand the teachings of Jesus," Mrs. Stetson writes, "the omnipotence and omnipresence of God are as demonstrable to-day as two thousand years ago, when the meek and lowly Nazarene came forth victor over death from the tomb.

"Jesus' experience and instruction would have been worthless to humanity had he failed in his final evidence of immortal manhood. God did not fail Jesus. His masculine representative of the ideal man, nor will He fail Mary Baker Eddy, the feminine representative of God, as the ideal woman, who has followed the same christ principle which delivered Jesus.

"Jesus built His church on the foundation rock, Christ. Mrs. Eddy discovered the science of being which Jesus taught and demonstrated, and established the spiritual building. The structure of truth and love, defence of Health, peace with, against which 'the gates of hell cannot prevail.'

"Psalm of praise sacred continually to Almighty God for the teachings of Jesus the Christ and of Mary Baker Eddy, and for the light of understanding of the eternal purpose which is unfolding and revealing man as immortal here, now and forever."

PLAN TO SHIELD PAROLED MEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Men who have won their paroles from federal prisons will hereafter step back into the world to begin life anew, unadvertised and without the limelight of publicity. Attorney General Wickersham and Robert V. La Dow, chairman of the parole board, have decided that publicity in such cases helps to defeat the object of the parole law.

No man will be paroled at all who has not a promise of definite employment or assistance.

Mrs. Augustine Derby, formerly Miss Olga Converse, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Converse.

BOSTON MAN WEDS BEAUTY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—Miss Olga Converse, daughter of the late Rear Admiral George T. Converse, U. S. N., and noted in Washington society as one of the most beautiful and cleverest girls in amateur theatricals, is the bride of Augustine Derby of Boston, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. Fr. Edward L. Bucey, pastor of St. Matthew's Catholic Church. The marriage took place in the residence of Mrs. Huntington Jackson, a sister of the bride.

Mrs. Derby is the youngest of three sisters. Since her debut three years ago she has been active in amateur theatricals and her directing was so cleverly done that she received many flattering offers from managers to adopt the professional stage as a career. After the debut of the other 2 year ago, Mrs. Derby travelled in Europe and spent much time in Italy with an aunt. She is a brunette, extremely vivacious and fond of outdoor sports as well as dancing.

PUTS AN END TO INDIGESTION AND A SOUR, GASSY, UPSET STOMACH

As there is often some one in your family who suffers an attack of indigestion or some form of Stomach trouble, why don't you keep some Diapepsin in the house handy?

This harmless blessing will digest anything you can eat without the slightest discomfort, and overcome a sour, gassy Stomach five minutes after.

Tell your pharmacist to let you read the formula plainly printed on these 50-cent cases of Pape's Diapepsin, then you will readily see why it makes indigestion, Sour Stomach, Heartburn and other distress go in five minutes and relieves at once such miseries as Belching, of Gas, Eructations of sour undigested food, Nausea, Headaches, Dizziness, Constipation and other Stomach disorders.

Some folks have tried so long to find relief from Indigestion and Dyspepsia or an out-of-order stomach with the common every-day cures advertised that they have about made up their minds that they have something else wrong, or believe theirs is a case of Nervousness, Gastritis, Catarrh of the Stomach or Cancer.

This, no doubt, is a serious mistake. Your real trouble is, what you eat does not digest, instead, it ferments and sours, turns to acid, gas and Stomach poison, which putrefy in the digestive tract and intestines, and, besides, poison the breath with nauseous odors.

A hearty appetite, with thorough digestion, and without the slightest discomfort or misery of the Stomach, is waiting for you as soon as you decide to try Pape's Diapepsin.

DIARY OF PHILLIPS' ASSASSIN SHOWS HE HAD DELUSIONS

WROTE THAT NOVELIST WAS HIS "ENEMY" AND WAS PERSECUTING HIM.

me to start me flirting with her. I got rather the latter impression.

A man was half in sight near the window. I think it was David Graham Phillips, but I am by no means sure. I looked steadily at this woman for a few moments, then glanced away just as the man came to the window to look out. I then kept my eyes away from that window as much as I could. The woman, however, continued for perhaps half an hour or three-quarters enough longer to sit there and take evident notice of me.

The diary goes on here to say that Goldsborough finally concluded that the woman was not attempting a flirtation, but that she was a relative of Mr. Phillips's, and that the two were amusing themselves at his expense over his last letter, which Mr. Phillips had just received. Later, Goldsborough says he left his house and at the same time the woman left the Arts Club, and he found that she was not a relative of Mr. Phillips, as he had at first supposed.

Saw Plans to Injure Him.

The diary continues: "It occurred to me later that when I flirted with her a claim of my having acted in an annoying way might have been circulated to my detriment. I must be careful of what plans this blackguard may make to injure me. The theory that he is seeking to do so, however, rests on stronger evidence than the mere incident just described. A few nights ago (I will try to get the exact date later) I found myself shadowed by a man who by fixed staring at me in an unmistakable manner on the street and rattling the spoon in his coffee cup when dressed in a different restaurant, evidently wished to arouse an indignant response.

I turned back on this man two or three times, and, apparently after he had left my trail, hit caught him each time. Now, detectives would probably have sought to irritate me to provoke a scrap. This man's appearance was as follows: Slightly below medium height, pale, projecting lower jaw, as of some one inverted at cursorum, face rather long, eyes brown, rather dark, and mounting a little small for a face so round. They were somewhat sunken.

Called on Phillips.

It looked like a good family likeness to Mr. Adamson, secretary to Mr. Gaynor, but his clothing was worn and second hand looking. He looked distinctly downcast when he noticed my turning back on him the last time, just as if he realized all his trouble had been in vain. I give these facts for what they may be worth.

Called last night again on Phillips. They said he had gone to Pittsfield, Mass. If so, my trouble has been in vain. I will try to find out from Mr. Aitkins. Whether the statement is true or not seems quite to long as mes- tionably confirm each other's statement. At any rate, P.'s ignoring my last letter and twice excusing himself after it, is in itself a confession of guilt of a sort. A man who has done no wrong will listen to one who claims he has; moreover the tone of that letter showed my intentions to be as amicable as he would let them be.

The next entry bore the date of the following day, June 12. Under this date Goldsborough wrote:

Heard pounding, as if a heavy stick on the street, last night similar to the noise made on other occasions down at Eleventh street, of which I complained. I was in bed, had left the gas burning, but felt too sleepy to get up and look out.

Under date of June 14 he tells of going to Bronx Park, but makes no reference to Phillips.

On June 15 appears this entry:

Went to Central Park and stayed with the kids. Dr. Powers came out, but I called later and he cut into my finger. No pain, so the day passed. The world turns slowly after all. Why couldn't God have made things move as quick as light rather than as slow as planets?

Forgot to mention that I passed a man in Central Park on the 12th of June that looked very much like D. G. Phillips. He was with a girl and walking slowly toward Seventy-fifth street. I wish I could have been introduced to him (Phillips) some time ago.

Tried Hand at Poetry.

A few pages further on appear the following addresses: No. 1,644 East Thirteenth street, Flatbush, Brooklyn, and Jacobs, No. 24 Lexon, telephone 1514 Harlem. Follow these come this entry: Love, Crime, Money, Sex, Athletics," all written upon one line, each capitalized and each separated by a comma. Then comes what appeared to be several feeble attempts at poetry. One read:

She was like the other one, as rain resembles dew,
Or mirage a likeness true, or as sunshine is to love.

Above this paragraph were two pen drawing of open umbrellas.

"Lacking in sensitiveness but mentally keen," was another quotation or comment, and a little further on, "Exaggerated ego," and "Fear of ridicule (strong)."

"Sonnet" to an Eyelash.

Another effort, called a sonnet, and addressed "To a Certain Lady's Eyelash," read:

Wan at the roots, but destined to aspire
And gain such gold as scarce the eye endures;
Glancing on such delicious flesh as lures
The famished lips of my inflamed desire.
How like my life! In its beaming pole:
Then heavenward curving in some futile way;
A tiny segment glowing for a space,
Engrossed by night, tossed up and down by day;
Oh, was told woe's final frenzies fail;
A dream that wanes in gold when near thy face.

A third, which bears the title, "With Pen of Passion," runs:

There is a fantasy my lady writes
Full oft, in witching, fervent monotone
On vellum of my passion. When the moon
Of ardent fame, fain of what delights
Wakens my frenzy-goddess, she indites
From love's mad lexicon of flesh and bone
Deep-delving sentences (to Love made known
By tongues of flame in keen transcendent sights!)
O, syllables eterne of honeyed fire!
Old when the gates of young Imperial Rome
Swung wide for you as to a conqueror's lyre!
Still resonant in Life's enormous dome,
Still palpitant in Time's immortal tome,
The Book of Sex, on parchment of Desire!

Data For "Vampire."

A few more pages and there was another diary entry. It was dated July 16 and read: "Dreams in the Dark. Inspiration. Love and Pain. The Cataract. The Sphinx. Sonnet."

Apparently these were titles of verses sent to Harper's. Further down the page other titles of manuscripts apparently sent to The Forum were: "The North Pole," "Spring and Time," and to the Smart Set "An Experience," "Song at Sunset" and "Seashell Sonnet." Under date of October 18 was this: "In ten weeks I will be earning $50 a week."

The entries concerning references to vampires, which attracted the attention of the coroner and Assistant District Attorney Robert Rubin, appeared near the back of the diary. The entries, like the others, were in a scarcely legible hand, the pages being often so blotted that the words could not be deciphered. But this much appeared clearly:

"Vengeance Unjustifiable."

NOTES, DATA FOR VAMPIRE.

Note—To create characters with real blood in their veins, beyond the powers of many writers. Much easier to take them from real life—to utilize their actual flesh and blood by the easy, distinguished, legalized and lucrative method of literary vampirism.

Nicholas Nickelby, a case of justinian vampirism. Exposing the abuses of the Court of Chancery in "Bleak House."

How to safeguard against being guilty of vampirism. Brotherly love the only safeguard. Man with broad human sympathies of a Dickens hard to imagine as a vampire. One could picture the vampire as a scoundrel, a treacherous pen perhaps, spoiler, possessed of intense pride, keen sense of artistic value, but not that which moves the sun in the heavens and all the stars.

Vengeance unjustifiable; wrong to use poisoned arrows on any enemy.

Some Epigrams.

Under the heading, "Epigrams," the following entries appeared.

Bliss is an effervescence—joy a flood.

Happiness is golden.

It is often good policy to let some one who thinks he is a thinker believe that you share his opinion.

It is difficult to understand why one staunch Christian has tried to determine why Adam and Eve counted the needs in their first apple.

The voluptuary is frequently a would-be yogi—the yogi frequently a would-be-have-been voluptuary.

Browning is one of those who seems to have the complex simplicity of a childlike manhood.

Although the notebook and diary fell from Goldsborough's pocket when he fell dying in the street after shooting Mr. Phillips and had not been found into his pocket, it did not reach Coroner Holtzhauser until late last night. The book was picked up by one of those who ran to the scene immediately after the tragedy and was handed over to Assistant District Attorney Rubin.

Mr. Rubin locked the book in his safe at the District Attorney's office until last night, when the coroner obtained it.

AID HALF RATE OPERA PROJECT

A committee has been appointed to interest financial men of Boston in the "opera for needy persons" movement, as planned by champions of the project in the home of Mrs. C. H. Converse of No. 256 Beacon street. Professors of Harvard, Technology and Tufts are interested in the plan.

MRS. ROBERTS WILL OPPOSE MRS. M'CALL

To a Massachusetts woman comes, the distinction of being the first woman "insurgent" among the wives and daughters of national legislators in Washington. Mrs. Ernest W. Roberts of Chelsea, wife of Congressman Roberts, is to run against Mrs. Samuel W. McCall of Winchester for the presidency of the Congressional Club, composed of women in the congressional set. The election comes this week. The McCall for the presidency, but some of the members objected because she is away from the capital often, and in her absence Mrs. John Sharp Williams, the wife of the Democrat and first vice-president of the organization, would occupy the chair. A majority of the members are the wives of Republicans.

WEST VIRGINIA BRIBERY CHARGE

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Aug. 25.—The legislature to-day took official recognition of the charges that bribery had been used here. Clarence W. Watson and William Chilton nominated in the Democratic caucuses to succeed Senators Elkins and Scott respectively.

A lengthy resolution calling for an immediate investigation, offered by Senator Goff, a Republican of Marshall County, was voted down by the Democrats but it was announced that the Democratic majority would introduce a bill of their own at the proper time.

The only specific charge is that a member of the caucus from Braxton County received $1,000 for his vote and a promise of $1,500 more, should Watson and Chilton be nominated and elected.

DYSPEPSIA-PROOF.

How Any Meal Can Be Thoroughly Enjoyed By Any Stomach.

Costs You Nothing to Try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Men, as a rule, are first discovered by their enemies. Their antagonists turn on the searchlight, and the proof of merit will lie in being able to stand the flash.

It was only in this way that Mr. White ever knew that dyspepsia was one of Mr. Black's worst enemies. Sitting face to face at a two-by-four table, he handed his afflicted friend the bill of fare:

Oyster Cocktail. Stuffed Olives.
Boston Clam Chowder.
Strained Gumbo.
Sirloin Steak with Mushrooms
Roast Beef Hash.
Boiled Ox Tongue with Sauerkraut
Lobster a la Newburg.
Baked Pork and Beans.
Combination Crab Salad.
Hot Mince Pie.
Pineapple Fritters.

Mr. White ordered a "little of each." Mr. Dyspepsia Black ordered crackers and a glass of milk. "I had such a big breakfast this morning," he said, "that I'll just take a bite to keep you company." But Mr. White could not be deceived: "I am afraid you can't stand the gaff, Mr. Black. Why don't you say you have dyspepsia and be done with it? You'll always have that hungry look anyhow as long as you have dyspepsia. Now listen. My stomach was in just as bad condition as yours at one time. But now I can eat anything, at any time. For instance, this clam chowder or sirloin steak or even the lobster would be just as welcome to my stomach as your crackers and milk. You don't realize how this dyspepsia I guess is robbing you of your spirit, of you energy and ability to think quickly. I can't help notice it. You haven't the cheer and sociability you had three months ago. Now I'll tell you what to do," and thereat the cheerful Mr. White took a vial from his pocket and extracted a wee tablet. "There, there is a tablet that contains an ingredient, one grain of which digests 3,000 grains of food. For even the worst dyspeptic it's the only thing that really gives relief. The reason is it relieves the stomach of nearly all the work it has to do, digests everything in the stomach and stimulates the gastric juice. I can't get along without them. They are Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. You can get them anywhere on earth for 50c a package."

Yes, it is true, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets absolutely stop heartburn, nausea, indigestion, dyspepsia of the worst type, sour stomach, bloaty feeling and all eructations and irritation, and freshen and invigorate the stomach. They cheer you up, and make you get all the good there is in your food. You will forget you ever had a stomach to worry you.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

DR. ROCHFORD, REAL HEROINE AT HOSPITAL FIRE

WOMAN DOCTOR FIRE HEROINE

Dr. Grace E. Rochford, in charge of the physicians and nurses at the Cushing Sanitarium, Roxbury, is receiving congratulations to-day for her heroism during the fire that yesterday destroyed the laundry connected with the institution, and for an hour threatened the safety of the women patients in the sanitarium. Through the presence of mind and bravery of Dr. Rochford, all the patients, most of whom were in rooms within twenty feet of the fire, were removed to more distant parts of the hospital without alarming any of them.

Loudest in their praises of the able woman physician to-day were the other doctors. All of these together with the staff of nurses and attendants were organized by Dr. Rochford into a rescue corps, to remove the patients from the vicinity of the operating room which overlooked the fire. Some of the patients had just been on the operating tables.

Immediately after one of the nurses had brought her word there was a dangerous grass fire sweeping up Parker hill from Heath street, she gave instructions to her staff. Then telephoned the police at the Roxbury Crossing Station, later calling up the Brookline fire headquarters. It was but a short time before she had pulled in the second alarm from the box directly in front of the sanitarium.

Later Dr. Rochford went through the rains, defying the shaky rafters which supported the second story of the laundry. Her idea was to find out just what damage had been done. Because of her personal courage, there was at no time any excitement in the main sanitarium building.

MISS ALICE M'VEY ENGAGED TO DOCTOR

The engagement of Miss Alice McVey, daughter of A. G. McVey, a Suffolk County court officer, to Dr. George Gregory Carroll of Rochester, N. Y., is announced in dispatches from Vienna, where Dr. Carroll and Miss McVey are. Miss McVey is studying at the University of Vienna, while her brother, Dr. Frederick McVey, While there became acquainted with Dr. Carroll, a graduate of Cornell and the University of Pennsylvania Medical School. The wedding will take place at Easter in Vienna. After their marriage the couple will spend a year abroad. Dr. Carroll's ancestors were connected with the famous Carroll family of Maryland.

TWO ALARM BLAZE IN CUSHING HOSPITAL

The laundry adjoining the Cushing Hospital on the top of Parker Hill, Roxbury, was burned out by a fire which did $1,500 damage and endangered the Cushing Hospital and other hospitals nearby. Patients in the Cushing Hospital particularly, were frightened by the smell of smoke from the laundry. Three of the patients were operated on only a few hours before. They were moved very carefully, however, that no ill results attended, so far as known.

POETIC MUSE THRILLS EARLE

Ferdinand Pinney Earle, possessor at one time or another of several wives and "affinities," has published in London a volume of sonnets which to-day made its appearance in Boston. On the title page by the author calls himself merely "Ferdinand Earle." He dedicates his verses to his father, General Earle. In one of his sonnets, which he calls "The Ineffable," the author says:

Man's love is but the sparkle of an ore
Of spiritual benevolence close buried
Around the universe, a rainbow veiled
About the ghost of heaven cold and stark.
And again—

* * * There is no building dream of God.
More wondrous than those human souls in love.

Enamored nightingales, Earle asserts, in music quell love's fever moaning as in tender dreams. This and other things are in "nocturne."

In an undedicated sonnet entitled "If Thou Ever Wistful," Earle remarks, in diphthalic syllables:

Should lustless passions steal through every vein
And, burning, tempt the heart to pay the price
Of sin and taste the purple wine of vice,
Pause—mortal spirit—battle within thee rein
The immemorial beast that would profane
The altars of the heart and mother
The progeny, leading the nightly dire
Of destiny into a wreckage of pain.

In "Paradoxical" Earle says: "We * * * blend in lonesome souls in passion's golden wine." There is no date by which the reader may guess if "we" may possibly refer to Miss Fishbacker, who was Mrs. Earle No. 1, or to Julia Kuttner or any other affinity.

In "Diorama" Earle says, reminiscently:

Joy! Oh, the curse of this wild mockery,
With her unbidden features taunting me;
Bravely I empty passion's cup, but see
Her melancholy phantom turning me.

Here again there is no date to guide the reader to even a remote conjecture as to the identity of "her" whose unbidden features haunted.

In a two-verse poem on page 76, under the caption, "And Man Is Flesh and Mind Is Spirit," the man whom Julia Kuttner asserts cast her off for another, writes:

Dead to her soul was my base sense,
The different natures dividing it me;
The ugly reptile reeling in his hide,
The chained tiger chafing control.

In "Paradoxical" he says:

And yet, dear partner in unending love,
The image of jealous sorrow leave no more
Keen as the noisse of our sinnors.

Among the "Recent Sonnets" in the thin volume is one on "Resurrection," dated June, 1910, in which Earle says:

Out of the wreck and ruin of old hopes
Serene he enters his new mortal state,
As unencumbered by the cast freight
As any heavenly spirit is by fate.

In his "foreword" Earle asserts some of his sonnets present an original arrangement of rhyme endings. If not a new form of sonnet, and several are "experiments of a modest or primitive like character." Others, he says, are the "naive expression of a moment."

ROBBERY IN HOWARD STREET EARLY TO-DAY

Soon Sloan of No. 60 Robinson street, Providence, was robbed of a pocketbook containing $30 in five-dollar bills early to-day by two men, one of whom was captured by Patrolman John Fox of the Court Square Station after a chase of several blocks. The arrested man gave his name as Joseph Marlboro and said he lived at No. 281 Silver street, South Boston. The other man escaped and the police are searching for him. Olsen said Marlboro took the pocketbook from his pocket and passed it to the other fellow. He said he caught the man in the act and both fled. He gave chase and his cries attracted Patrolman Fox who sprinted after Marlboro.

PAINFUL TROUBLE WITH FINGER NAILS

Sometimes Three Fingers Without Nails at One Time. Began 25 Years Ago. No Permanent Cure. Began to Use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In a Short Time Nails Were Well. No Further Trouble.

"I have suffered from the same trouble (painful finger nails) at different periods of my life. Twenty-five years ago, after typhoid fever, perhaps twenty-five years ago, after trying home remedies without getting helped, I asked my doctor to prescribe for me, but it was not for a year or more that my nails and fingers were well. The inflammation and suppuration began at the base of the finger nail. Sometimes it was so painful that I had to use a poultice to induce suppuration. After the pus was discharged the swelling would go down until the next period of inflammation, generally not more than a week or two afterwards. These frequent inflammations resulted in the loss of the nail. I had sometimes as many as three fingers in the state at one time.

"Perhaps ten years later, I began again to suffer from the same trouble. Again I tried various remedies, among them a prescription from a doctor of a friend of mine, who had suffered from a like trouble. It seemed to help somewhat for a time, but it was not a permanent cure, next tried a prescription from my own doctor, but this was no irritating to the sensitive, diseased skin that I could not use it. I began to use Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I had used the Cuticura Ointment previously on my children's scalps with good effect. I did not use the Soap exclusively, but I rubbed the Cuticura Ointment on the ends of the nail every night thoroughly, and as often beside as I could. I had not used it but a few weeks before my nails were better, and in a short time they were apparently well. There was no more suppuration, no inflammation, the nails grew out clean again. One box of Cuticura Ointment was all that I used in effecting a cure. (Signed) Mrs. I. J. Horton, Kaleigh, N. Y., Nov. 13, 1910. On Feb. 25, Mrs. Horton wrote: "I have had no further return of the trouble with my finger nails."

HOPPE GIVES UP CUE FOR LOVE

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Willie Hoppe, the most marvelous billiardist of the present generation, champion at the 18.1 and 18.2 balkline game, announced to-day his retirement from professional billiards. He will become a partner of his father-in-law, Thomas W. Walsh, of No. 141 West Ninety-fifth street, a wealthy clothier.

Hoppe was married to Miss Alice Walsh, in Baltimore, on December 14. It was an elopement. He met Miss Walsh by appointment at the home of one of her friends and they ran off to Baltimore, and were married in the Cathedral by the Rev. P. J. Sharp, chancellor of the archdiocese.

Mr. Walsh was angry for a time, but finally sent his congratulations to the young couple. It appears that his only objections to young Hoppe, who had been a constant visitor at the Walsh home, was he was a professional billiardist. Mr. Walsh took the young couple into his home.

Known as "Boy Wonder."

To-day Hoppe communicated his decision to retire to his manager, Billy Maris, who later promptly cancelled all engagements for professional appearances of Hoppe throughout the country. Hoppe sacrifices a salary of $5,000 he has been receiving from the Brunswick-Balke-Collender, the manufacturers of billiard tables, and an income from billiard matches of about $20,000 a year. He has been receiving $500 for every exhibition in addition to the gate receipts, a big percentage of which went to Hoppe.

His custom was to bet $500 in every match and he has been a consistent winner.

Willie Hoppe has been playing billiards since he was twelve years old. At that time his father, Frank Hoppe, took his younger brother, Frank Hoppe, Jr., around the country giving exhibitions. It was necessary for the boys to stand on soap boxes in order to see over the top of tables and make shots. Willie became known as the "boy wonder."

When still in his teens he went to Paris and defeated Maurice Vignaux, recognized at that time as the "old master" of billiards. By this feat he attracted attention. On his return to New York he was challenged by George Sisson, known as the "student." He defeated Sisson decisively in a match game in Madison Square Garden, before the largest crowd that ever saw a billiard match in this country.

Held World's Records.

Down that time Willie Hoppe has been known as the greatest billiard player in the world. He has defeated such experts as Harry Cline, of Philadelphia, George Sutton and Calvin Demarest, of Chicago, Albert G. Cutler, of Boston, and Ora Morningster of this city.

Hoppe is the only billiardist who ever held the 18.1 and the 18.2 billiard championships at the same time. On November 29 of last year in a match game in Philadelphia with Joseph Mayer, the amateur champion. Hoppe established a high run record of 155 points at 18.1 play. The next previous record was made by Hoppe four weeks before, when he clicked off 151 points. In December he again defeated George Sisson at Madison Square Garden and in this match established a new world's average for a 500 point game. His average was 33.13.

ESTHER FOSS

MRS. HUMPHREYS FLAYS AMERICA

After spending two whole months in Boston, New York and Washington, Mrs. Desmond Humphreys of London, as reported by cable to-day, has issued a book entitled "America Through English Eyes," in which she makes the same criticism of America that one would be likely to make after such an "investigation."

"America is a land of licensed rudeness," writes Mrs. Humphreys, "where the people are taxed heavily, ruled despotically and blackmailed systematically.

"The American husband is neither better nor worse than any other husband making money for his wife and giving too little of his time for quarrelling."

Her photograph of the American man is:

"When young he is so badly dressed that he affronts the critical eye. When he is middle-aged he is corpulent and unhealthy looking."

DEMOCRATIC PEACE CONFERENCE IN APRIL

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—A national Democratic harmony conference will be held in Indianapolis April 12 and 13 next to get the Democratic leaders in full swing preparatory to the coming campaign of 1912. The conference will close on Jefferson's birthday with a harmony banquet.

ARKANSAS HOUSE WANTS INCOME TAX

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 25.—The Arkansas House went on record to-day in favor of the proposed amendment to the Federal constitution by a vote of 80 to 3. The large majority was won with the argument that under the amendment Arkansas would have to pay only $1 to every $1,000,000 paid by New York, thereby equalizing the taxation of the rich.

DOZEN HURT IN WEDDING FIGHT

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—One man was fatally stabbed, a dozen others seriously injured and ten arrests made following a fight at Seventeenth and Wood streets to-day, where three Hungarian weddings were being celebrated in the same block. The trouble started over rivalry in the various celebrations.

PATTERNMAKERS VOTE.

Boston Patternmakers' Association has called a special meeting at No. 724 Washington street to-night to poll the vote of its members on the question of holding a general convention of the Patternmakers' League of North America this year. Similar meetings are ordered by every local of the calling in the United States, Mexico and Canada.

HELEN FOSS

GOV. FOSS'S NIECE A BRIDE

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

One of the most interesting weddings of the year was that at noon to-day in Trinity Church of pretty Grace Kellen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Vail Kellen of Commonwealth avenue, and niece of Governor and Mrs. Eugene N. Foss, to that well-known young Southerner, Paul Herman Creel of Louisville, Ky.

The church was very simply decorated for the occasion with a profusion of greenery and a few potted plants and makes a most suitable background for the interesting and picturesque bridal party. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Alexander Mann, the rector, assisted by the Rev. John Mockridge of Trinity Church, N. Y.

Miss Constance Kellen was her sister's maid of honor and for the first time the Misses Esther and Helen Foss, daughters of the Governor and were familiarly known as the "Foss Twins," acted as bridesmaids, making a most interesting trio of attendants.

The maid of honor wore a handsome gown of blue hand-embroidered marquisette over pompadour silk and picture hat of gold lace trimmed with a large blue ostrich plume and marlbon. The bridesmaids were gowned alike in pale pink over pompadour silk and hats of gold lace trimmed with pink ostrich plumes and marlbon. They carried baskets of nigonnette, ferns and green orchids.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an especially beautiful gown of cream white brocade and Carrack ma cross lace and instead of the conventional bride's bouquet of valley lilies carried a large bouquet of freaks.

Maitland Stokesley Orth of Boston was the best man and the ushers were the bride's two brothers, Roger and Philip Kellen and Thomas L. Wiles of Boston, John Bulwer of New York, Arthur Pelletreau of Louisville and Edward Fletcher of Portland, Maine.

A large reception followed the ceremony at the Kellen home in Commonwealth avenue. The young people are to make their home in Louisville, where the bridegroom's family is among the best known of fine old Southern stock. Mrs. Kellen, who assists in receiving, is wearing an elaborate gown of heliotrope liberty velvet, hand-embroidered and trimmed with point d'alencon lace. Her hat, of the same color, is trimmed with ostrich plumes.

C. L. U. TO ADVISE SCHOOL BOARD

Declaring that the present Boston School Board is heedless, Boston Central Labor Union, representing 50,000 wage earners, will at its next meeting take action toward electing an advisory committee of the school committee. The committee will be similar to those of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and other representative organizations in the city.

The executive board, in its resolution on the subject, declares that the delegates to the C. L. U., representing nearly 300 labor unions and more than 50,000 organized wage earners and a large portion of the parents of Boston school children, should be more interested and as helpful in school matters as any other representative Boston organization.

The board also declared: That it is the opinion of the board that in the interests of the children of the working people of the present Boston school committee is inadequate to meet the needs of the education of the children and that it is imperative that if we want our children educated so as to be able to start out in the world properly equipped to do so a change should be made, and we recommend to the Central Labor Union that it at once begin an agitation that the school committee be made a body composed of twenty-five members, one to be elected from each ward.

"The health and care of children, both in the home and in the schools, should be one of the principal duties of every civilized community."

AUTO DISAPPEARED AS HE SAID "GOOD NIGHT"

"How much time should a young man take to idd a pretty girl good-night?" The police of the Broadway station, South Boston, give it up. Early to-day a police man saw an unoccupied auto at the corner of Broadway and E street. How long it had been there he did not know. It was there when he returned to the corner an hour or so afterward and it was there three hours later. By this time the policeman had become interested in the auto. He conferred with brother officers. They decided it had been stolen and abandoned. One policeman, an amateur chauffeur, started up the machinery and he and the other patrolman took a joy ride to the station. Half an hour afterwards a young man rushed into the station and said his touring car had been stolen. "I left it while I was saying good night to a young lady," he said. "Your car is all right," the lieutenant assured him, "but say, for Heaven's sake, how long does it take you to say good-night?"

BOY STABBED WITH HATPIN LOSES EYE

NEWBURYPORT, Jan. 25.—Hope of saving the sight of the injured eye of Arthur Fowle, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fowle, having been abandoned, it was removed at the Anna Jaques Hospital, where the little fellow had been undergoing treatment in order that the sight of the other eye might be saved. The operation was performed by an eye specialist, and was deferred until every other expedient had been exhausted. The eye was injured by a thrust of a hatpin while children were at play.

REV. W. J. DIXON QUITS BOSTON

The Rev. W. J. Dixon is busy making arrangements to assume his new duties at the Episcopal Church in Tucson, Ariz. He will say farewell to his congregation at Grace Episcopal Church, South Boston, a week from Sunday and a few days later will start for the West. He has been at Grace Church six years.

Mr. Dixon received his early education in Toronto and then a three years' course at Cambridge, Eng. He later continued studies in Harvard University. In 1901, he was ordained to the deaconship in St. John's Chapel, Cambridge University, and ordained priest in St. Mary's Church, Cambridge, in May, 1902. In 1901 he became pastor of St. Luke's Church in Fall River, remaining there six years. In 1905, he was assigned to Grace Episcopal Church in South Boston.

Two years ago Mr. Dixon married Miss Laura F. M. Walker of Ontario, a graduate of McGill University, Montreal. He is also the recipient of a degree of A. M. from Radcliffe.

ALL READY FOR IRISH ENVOYS

Mayor Fitzgerald will introduce the two Gaelic envoys, the Rev. Michael O'Flanagan and Fionan MacColum, who are to be given a reception Sunday night in the Hollis Street Theatre.

An interesting story of what has been done in the revival of Ireland's language, literature and pastimes will be told by the envoys. Among the other speakers will be Professor F. N. Robinson of Harvard and Alderman James T. Barrett of Cambridge.

The Irish Choral Society, under the direction of Charles F. Forrester, will give a concert and the following societies will march to the meeting in a body: The Irish National Foresters, Division 20 and 37, A. O. H., Charlestown; Division 32, 13 26 and 24 of Boston, military divisions of Middlesex County. Division 12 with its drum corps will head the line of procession.

HETTY GREEN'S SONG HIT—"When a Fellow Is Twenty-One." Words and music free with the Sunday AMERICAN.

RICHARDSON TO HEAD DEMOCRATS

Several changes are likely to be made in the list of officials of the Democratic State Committee at its meeting at the Quincy House at 1 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. Members of the committee are enthusiastic over the acceptance by Frank C. Richardson, former collector of the port of Gloucester, who represents Essex County on the committee, of the position of chairman. Mr. Richardson has been one of the most active and valued members of the committee for several years, and did notable work also on the stump.

His selection as chairman is agreeable to Governor Foss, for it was Richardson who made the nominating speech for the Governor at the Faneuil Hall convention. He didn't stop there, either, but talked Foss from the housetops all through the campaign.

Efforts are being made to induce John F. McDonald of Ward 23 to remain as chairman of the executive committee. It is possible he will, but if not, it is probable that Dr. John A. Riggan of Hyde Park will have that place.

Do You Open Your Mouth

Like a young bird and gulp down whatever food or medicine may be offered you? Or, do you want to know something of the composition and character of that which you take into your stomach whether as food or medicine?

Most intelligent and sensible people now-a-days insist on knowing what they employ whether as food or as medicine.

Dr. Pierce believes they have a perfect right to INSIST upon such knowledge. So he publishes, broadcast and on each bottle-wrapper, what his medicines are made of and verifies it under oath. This he feels he can well afford to do because the more the ingredients of which his medicines are made are studied and understood the more will their superior curative virtues be appreciated.

For the cure of woman's peculiar weaknesses and derangements, giving rise to frequent headache, backache, dragging-down pain or distress and kindred symptoms of weakness, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a most efficient remedy. It is equally effective in giving strength to nursing mothers and in preparing the system of the expectant mother for baby's coming, thus rendering childbirth safe and comparatively painless. The "Favorite Prescription" is a most potent, strengthening tonic to the general system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. It is also a soothing and invigorating nervine and cures nervous exhaustion, nervous prostation, neuralgia, hysteria, spasms, chorea or St. Virtus's dance, and other distressing nervous symptoms attendant upon functional and organic diseases of the distinctly feminine organs.

A host of medical authorities of all the several schools of practice, recommend each of the several ingredients of which "Favorite Prescription" is made for the cure of the diseases for which it is claimed to be a cure. You may read what they say for yourself by sending a postal card request for a free booklet of extracts from the leading authorities, to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y., and it will come to you by return post.

It's foolish and often dangerous to experiment with new or but slightly tested medicines—sometimes urged upon the afflicted as "just as good" or better than "Favorite Prescription." The dishonest dealer sometimes insists that he knows what the proffered substitute is made of, but you don't and it is decidedly for your interest that you should know what you are taking into your stomach and system expecting it to act as a curative. To him its only a difference of profit. Therefore, insist on having Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Send 31 one-cent stamps to pay cost of mailing only on a free copy of Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 pages cloth-bound. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

AGED "MEDIUM" IN DIRE WANT

The daughter-in-law of an English Lord, without any relatives in America, is in dire need in Whitkop. She is Mrs. Almira Woodbury. She is eighty-seven years of age. She declares that her husband was the second son of Lord Kenyon.

Since last October Mrs. Woodbury has been provided with a home and food through the kindness of Mrs. Lewis Shipman of No. 35 Moore street, Whitkop. Now Mrs. Shipman is making efforts to raise some money with which to defray the expenses of the aged woman. Mr. Shipman found Mrs. Woodbury in poverty in the South End of Boston by the merest accident.

"My husband was in the South End one day," said Mrs. Shipman, when he noticed a white-haired woman attempting to cross the street. She hesitated. My husband went to her assistance. He was kind to her and she asked him to call and see her. He found her living in a bare basement room destitute.

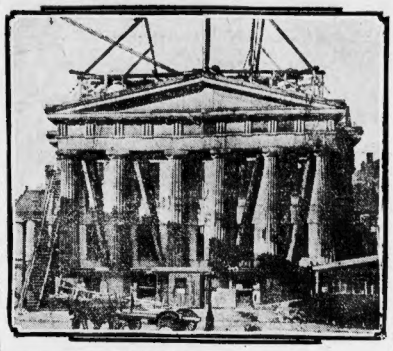
"He brought her to our house and we have done what we could for her. I feel now that I have a right to acquaint the public with her condition and ask assistance.

"Any money or clothing that may be contributed for her benefit will be carefully used for that purpose. She is a widow with no children. She was born in Thompson, Ct. She got some of her husband's property, although he left a considerable estate. She is in good health, but of course can not earn a living.

"I hope that the generous people of Boston will help to take care of this aged woman. I shall acknowledge any remittances made to me for her."

Mrs. Woodbury is the oldest psychic reader in the United States. Occasionally her "Indian control" visits her and in the Indian dialect speaks words to her while she inquires for the edification of those who consult her.

How Old Custom House Is Being Propped Up



OLD CUSTOMS HOUSE SETTLES

The old Custom House at India and Devonshire streets has settled nearly a foot within the past ten years. While the permanent plans to build a column twenty-four stories high and eighty feet square to support the walls of the old structure, it was now that it will be almost impossible to carry out the plans without tearing down the two wings stone by stone and rebuilding the wings. The column was to be 300 feet in height.

The Norcross Brothers Company, which has the contract to build up the foundation, said in laying concrete caissons that the present structure did not have the foundation necessary to hold such a large building. The men at work found ties from seven to twelve feet in length which were sunk in clay about three feet. Above these in of the piles were granite cappers. The contractors began their work on the foundation for the column last June. It was planned to sink a foundation 100 feet into the ground or until rock bottom was reached. At the present time the piles have been sunk fifty-eight feet. Since last June the building has sunk a few inches owing to the jar of removing the stone from the roof. The settling began on the State street side and worked its way to the McKinley Square side. To distribute the weight workmen were kept busy today shoring up the two wings with great pieces of timber.

Superintendent Ernest E. Hunter, in charge of the work, said today:

"The wings of the buildings are gradually sinking. While we shall be able to make a strong foundation for the 300 foot column, it will be best to tear down the wings and rebuild them or place a complete foundation under the wings. To place the foundation under the wings it would be best to tear down the wings stone by stone. In case no foundation is put under the wings they will continue to sink for a time until they strike a hard pan, and then a little later on will again begin to settle. The walls of the wings however are too firmly bonded to ever collapse."

DEFEND SCHOOL FOR SICK PUPILS

The school for tubercular school children in Franklin Park will not be abandoned without a determined fight. The first battle against Chairman Edward F. McSweeney of the Boston Consumptives Hospital, who wants to close the school and distribute the children among the other schools, will be fought at 3 o'clock this afternoon at a hearing to be given by the trustees of Mr. McSweeney's board in their rooms in the Tremont building.

Practically every physician of repute in Boston, all the professional nurses, the teachers in the schools generally and the Franklin Park School particularly, the women's clubs and associations, are in open hostility to Mr. McSweeney's plan. Mrs. Eugene N. Foss is one of those in favor of keeping the school. One of the women who devotes much of her time to the work of making the Franklin Park School a success and who believes the remedy for its defects lies in its extension as far as there is need for it, said today that Mr. McSweeney will have a hard task to meet the unanswerable arguments in the schools favor.

One Hundred Children in Attendance.

About one hundred children have been in attendance at the school until within the last few days, when they have been gradually withdrawn and redistributed in other schools by Mr. McSweeney. The children are about equally divided in sex. They are for the most part from very humble homes and come from all parts of Boston, even the extremest limits being no obstacle, as children make the long trip from their homes and back again at night with ease.

The school is kept going from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m., and six days a week. About one-third of the eight hours is given to study. The rest is for play, recreation and rest. At 9 o'clock they arrive, and at once get a breakfast of stewed fruit, cereal and all to do with bins and wanted to forget her the milk and cocoa they want. Then study begins. The noon meal is usually roast or stew, good fresh vegetables, dessert and milk; at supper the little ones have milk or cocoa, crackers and jam or something of that order.

Each is given a shower bath daily and much time is devoted to giving them instruction in hygiene. In practice it is proved that each tiny patient is really a missionary not only in preaching what he has learned to preserve health, but in manners as well.

Reply to McSweeney.

It is contended by the men and women who are opposed to closing the Franklin Park School that Chairman McSweeney's one argument up to this time is that the school is hopelessly inadequate in its effort to handle the problem of caring for the tubercular children. They say that to take care of a mere hundred, with thousands infected, is a combination of tragedy and farce. It is declared that he plans for a school in each larger building on the line of the Franklin Park institution with nurse and teacher in charge.

The advocates of the present plan give that their efforts to date have been painfully inadequate. But it is a start, they say. They demand a great segregation of children in one or more separate buildings and protest that to have infected children set among those in sound health is a needless risk for the patient and the other children.

CATHEDRAL FUND TOTALS $1,112,000

The fund for the proposed cathedral for the Episcopal Church in Boston now amounts to $1,112,000, having increased $42,344 last year, against an increase of $41,063 during the previous twelve months. The bequests of Mrs. Oliver W. Peabody which leaves the residue of her estate to the cathedral fund is the principal item made towards the fund since the provision of Miss Mary Sophia Walker of Winchester. Nothing has been put forward securing a site. Charles G. Saunders of Boston is chancellor of the cathedral; Harry Burnett of Southboro is treasurer, and the Rev. Dr. D. D. Addison of Brookline is clerk.

WARRANTS READY FOR DEATH OF BANDITS

Assistant Clerk George R. Lord of the Essex County Superior Court in Salem has prepared extracts of the records, trial, conviction and sentence of Wasili Blankowski and Andre Ipsen, the Lynn bandits who killed Thomas A. Landregan, shoe manufacturer, and Policeman James H. Carroll in Lynn last July, and one of the death warrants has been sent to Governor Foss and another to Sheriff Johnson. The sheriff will transmit one of the warrants, together with the prisoners, to the warden of the State prison at Charlestown the latter part of February, at least ten days before the date set for execution, which is the week of March 5.

SAYS 'TECH MAY MOVE AFTER ALL

Boston may lose the Massachusetts Institute of Technology after all. According to the latest developments the Spring field offer of $1,000,000 and a site of thirty acres is to be given serious consideration, judging from the statement made this morning by President Richard Cockburn Maclaurin of Technology.

"Until yesterday afternoon we did not consider the Springfield offer at all seriously; but now I know that there are a number of prominent and influential business men earnestly working to get Technology to their city," said Doctor Maclaurin.

"I received late yesterday afternoon a telephone call from these men in Springfield and now I know that they mean business. I will therefore have to go there soon. I will therefore have planned in order to look thoroughly into the matter from that end.

"Springfield is well located for such a school," continued Doctor Maclaurin, "but other than that I know nothing about its advantages, as we have not given the question, as yet, the slightest consideration. I shall look into the matter carefully on my visit to that city.

"When I stated a few days ago that Tech would be forced to move to a cheaper site I did not infer a long jump—or, in fact, have we at any time considered anything outside of greater Boston. There are a number of cities which have been out very attractive inducements asking Tech to move. Although we would very naturally consider any serious offer," continued Technology's head, "it would require a very exceptional one to make us think about it at all seriously."

$100,000 FIRE IN COBALT TERRITORY

GOWANDA, Ont., Jan. 25.—Half of this town was wiped out by fire today with loss of $100,000. Gowanda is situated in the heart of the Cobalt territory. The homeless are suffering intensely from the cold.

EDNA A. DAVEY, LAW STUDENT'S SECRET BRIDE

Boston lawyers today discussed the remarkable statement of Judge White, who yesterday sitting in the Divorce Court revealed secret marriages. Judge White had heard the story told by Harry E. Davey, seeking a divorce from his wife, who was Miss Edna B. Armstrong, a Brockton girl. Davey is a student at Boston University Law School and was at the time of his marriage attending Williams college.

Davey told the court that he and his wife were married secretly in 1905. He said that he and his wife agreed to keep the marriage a secret. She continued to work as stenographer in the office of Calvin, Kingman & Swift, in Brockton.

After a while Davey says he learned that his wife was receiving the attentions of another man. He remonstrated with her, and they quarrelled. Finally she told him that she would have nothing more to do with him and wanted to forget her marriage. At this point Judge White said:

"It looks as though he wanted to be the let up with this secret marriage and didn't want her to go around with any men of her own age. But there is no evidence here that she did not intend to keep her agreement of living with him after his graduation from law school."

Judge White has the case under advisement.

WOMEN TRY TO SETTLE STRIKE

Two Boston women have been appealed to to settle the differences existing between the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates and their employes and which, it is feared may result in another disastrous strike. The two women are Mrs. Elizabeth Henderson Brooks, the wealthy Back Bay woman, and Mrs. Sara A. Conboy, business agent of the textile workers of Boston. Both women were prominent in the recent strike of the workers in the Roxbury Carpet Mills.

The situation in Ludlow is serious. John Golden, general president of the Textile Workers of America, has been there several weeks trying to adjust difficulties. Last night his wife joined him, and Mrs. Evans and Mrs. Conboy to come there. Mrs. Evans is on her way, and her companion will leave this afternoon.

The failure of President Golden to adjust matters is looked upon as an indication of serious condition of affairs in that place. So complicated is the entire affair that all the workers who were at all active in the previous strike at Ludlow are being discharged for one cause or another. The employes claim that this is an organized effort on the part of the Ludlow Associates to break up the union. This situation has existed several weeks.

PEOPLE YOU KNOW—Your friends or acquaintances—perhaps yourself. You read about them and see them pictured in the Sunday AMERICAN—in the Society Pages, in the City Life Section, or with the News.

SEVEN-YEAR STRIKE BY PAINTERS AT END

Following a seven-year strike, with injunction restrictions that prevented the union men working in opposition to the strike, Painters' Union No. 11 of this city and E. C. Burk & Co. have settled their differences and a mutually satisfactory basis of work in harmony. While the full terms of this settlement are not made public, union painters are now free to work for the firm in question for the first time in seven years. The information has been published. As Burk & Co employ more than 100 men, the settlement is hailed with satisfaction.

YOUNG BURNS FIGHTS FOR A WORLD'S TITLE

When Frankie Burns of Jersey City fights Digger Stanley, the lightest champion of Great Britain, for a match at the International title Friday night in New York, his mother will have a mass said for him.

Frankie Burns claims the lightest championship of America and, since he has barely tried the length and breadth of the land for a match and has been unable to get anybody to meet him at the weight it looks like he has at least as good a claim as anybody else. Digger Stanley is over here with the object of "cleaning up" the American crop of lightams and he will start with Burns.

Burns is a character in himself, although only twenty. Three years ago he was the poor son of a poorer family, working in a poorly paid boy's job. He was left fatherless at 14, the oldest of five children. His mother had to work to support the babies, but Frankie went to work at eleven. When he became a good scrapper three years ago he quit work at a "fallboard" boy for the Adams Express Company, and his mother quit work, too. Now they live in a comfortable home, supported by Frankie's fighting powers alone.

"What would we do without him?" said Mrs. Burns, when the newspaper man questioned her. "We couldn't get along at all. It used to be very hard for us, but now it is quite easy. Frankie brings home his money to me, and I take care of it for him. He's the best boy in the world."

"Do you mind your boy's fighting?" Mrs. Burns was asked.

"Sure I do, on the day that he fights," she answered. "Don't I go down to St. Mary's church and burn candles, so as he won't get hurt. Sure I do. Only, when he fights that Englishman, I'm going to have a mass said for him."

Father of the Family.

Mrs. Burns said a whole lot about her grandchildren. Frankie. He is the father of the house, and if it weren't for his earnings the ring his crippled sister would never have had the benefit of the professors and specialists, whose treatment now has the little girl on the way to complete recovery.

Burns never had an idea of becoming a fighter until three years ago. He then had what he thought was a good job, with the back of an express wagon. He started in that job for $20 a month, and got $25, and was making $35 a month when he decided to try his hand at the boxing game.

After showing some prowess in the back room of a Jersey store, he was started at the Long Acre Club. He made good from the start, and to-day counts twenty-five victories on his record. He isn't too vain to admit that Young Cleary has whipped him once, in the first ten-round bout he ever fought. He afterward squared accounts with O'Leary, and has gone down the line beating everybody within five pounds of his own weight, until to-day he stands pretty close to the top of the heap.

In style Frankie Burns is a reminder of Terry McGovern, rushing and fighting all the time, still possessing a certain cleverness that is mystifying to an opponent.

The Idol of Jersey City.

Outside of his family, in his home town Frankie Burns is nothing less than an idol. Knockout Brown has his followers in Second avenue, New York, but Burns has a whole city full of worshippers. They are proud of the quiet, inoffensive way he follow and his ring record, and whenever he fights he carries the hopes and best wishes of thousands.

For a year past Burns has been the standard-bearer of an association with a membership of 200 or more, organized by himself. There are cards, checkers and dominoes to be had in the clubhouse, but the most popular room is the locker room, the little cubbyhole off the yard where the punching bag hangs. Here any evening a number of youngsters, with the example of their standard-bearer before them, are whanging the bag and going through the limited exercises that the room affords. All would emulate Frankie.

Burns doesn't know the taste of intoxicating liquor and he never has smoked a cigarette or a cigar. Saloons dot his home vicinity every neighborhood but where is his friend, yet the little fighter never frequents any of the places. A candy store is his "hangout" and ice cream soda is his favorite beverage.

Every morning during the school calls driver's rush hour Frankie tends the candy store for a friend in whose back room he learned to box. He is a wonder to the young patrons of the store, and all of them know his ring record by heart.

If Frankie goes home next Friday night with the scalp of Digger Stanley, all Jersey City will whoop it up.

Business Success Through Publicity

Introducing New Goods

Persistency is as important in business as it is in other lines. The man who has a good thing and talks about it day in and day out to those who can use it is eventually going to secure buyers.

A man was traveling for an underwear house when an idea occurred to him of utilizing under a protected trade-marked name the linen mesh method of weaving underwear. He could make the under-garments with the best material, get greater warmth, yet sell them at the same price as those sold for containing more material.

He made the goods and then he started in the Fall of the year to talk about them, though they weren't to be worn until the next Summer. He told about his underwear—why it was good and why it should be worn, and asked the reader to call on the dealer for it. All Fall and Winter he kept talking about his underwear.

The dealers became interested. They ordered in small quantities. When Summer came along the demand grew so great that they were unable to fill their orders and they ordered in larger quantities.

To-day that trade-marked underwear, because its maker had a good idea, and was not afraid to advertise it persistently, is known over the country. The manufacturer is now able to supply one-half of the orders he could take. He had the courage to advertise and the persistency to keep at it out of season as well as in season.

If you have the goods to sell and you want the biggest local trade, tell about them in the most effective way—that is, through the medium of the local newspaper. The best way to advertise is in a paper which reaches the family.

The best way to reach the people of Boston is by the columns of the Boston American. It reaches almost 400,000 readers daily. It is read by more of the masses and the classes than any other newspaper in New England. Address Trade Aid Department, Boston American, Summer Street, Boston, Mass., for further particulars.

FORCE JOHNSON TO CRY QUITS

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—It does not take a real white man's hope to have Jack Johnson cry quits. The champion learned this to his sorrow when he appeared at the Harrison Street Police Court to sign bail bonds for his brother, Charlie, and Chauffeur Brown, who had been arrested on Madison street on a charge of disorderly conduct.

While waiting for the troubles of the arrested men to be settled the champion was invited into the gymnasium by John J. O'Brien, instructor of Jiu Jitsu in the police department and former tutor of ex-President Roosevelt, where he was initiated into the mysteries of Japanese self-defence.

O'Brien allowed the champion some holds and Johnson appeared as a novice in the hands of the Jiu Jitsu expert. ofHd after hold was broken, and to top it all off O'Brien put the champion through a course of sprouts that brought "quits" from the champion in a remarkably short time.

Jack, however, liked the game so well that he will take a lesson from the expert to-day.

Johnson's brother and chauffeur were arrested for refusing to drive away the automobile, posing with a crowd had gathered. Their case will be heard by Judge Newcomer this morning.

BROOKLINE OUT TO STOP BOSTON

BOSTON H. C.		BROOKLINE H. C.
Winsor, f		f, B. Shine
Bowen, f		Dalton
Townsend, f		J. Shine
Foster, c		c, Grimley
Lovering, g		g, p, Stevens
Greenhood, g		g, Cook
Canterbury, p		p, H. Cook

The Brookline hockey team will make a fight to-night to stop the Boston Hockey Club in its upward march for the championship of the Boston Hockey League. The teams will battle on the rink at the Boston Arena. Both have a big following among the hockey enthusiasts.

The Brookline outfit is one of the strongest ever sent out by that district and Manager Billy Cleaves has strengthened up the week spots and figures he has a winning combination defending the colors, a local city that can give any team trouble.

Billy Cook's work has not been showing the high class playing that stamped it as the best organization in this vicinity. For that reason many believe that Brookline may spring a surprise, as a glance over the membership of the team proves the make-up is a veteran one.

The beating that Brookline gave to the fast Milton Hockey Club last Monday night shows that the team is traveling fast.

The addition of Gormley and Jimmie Shine, the greatest of all ex-intercollegiate players in the forward line, has worked wonders in that line and the defense is maintained while the defence has tightened up so that the swift Boston shooters will find it difficult to penetrate to the goal.

While the teams are on friendly terms they are likely to forget everything in the heat of the rivalry which will be kicked up when players get in action, as both teams are out to win.

ALGER TO BOX GROVER HAYES

Another stellar attraction will be offered the members of the Hyde Park A. C. next Monday night. The feature bout will be one of ten rounds between George Alger, the local lightweight, and Grover Hayes of Philadelphia.

This is a real high-class bout and will appeal to every local follower of boxing. Alger to-day is one of the best lightweights in New England. He is fast and clever, is a good hitter and considered by experts to have a grand chance to climb to the top of the ladder. In facing Hayes he will get a thorough trial.

Grover has been looking among the top notchers for the last few years and knows every trick of the trade. He has met such stars as Matty Baldwin, Tommy O'Keefe, Hay Brennan, Jem Hyland and Spike Robson. Hayes needs no introduction to New Englanders. If Alger can win from the clever Philadelphian he will be recognized as a star throughout the country and will be in a position to secure matches with the best lightweights in the world. A bout of the Alger-Hayes quality, followed by the excellent show of last Monday night, means a full attendance of members of the Hyde Park A. C. next Monday night.

MALDEN HIGH TEAM TO PLAY 23 GAMES

The baseball schedule for the coming season of the Malden High School has been announced by Manager Turner. It consists of twelve league games and twenty-three games in all. There are two open dates which will probably be filled in with games, one about the middle of April, so as to give the players two side trips. The first game is to be played on April 8 with Tech '12, at Malden, this being a little earlier than in previous years. Following is the schedule:

PITCHER HOLDS BACK CONTRACT

That the worm will turn, even in a team that finished seventh, in the American League race, is illustrated in the case of Pitcher Walter Johnson of the Washington Americans, who declines to accept a contract for the present season with the Senators, which calls for a modest stipend of $6,500.

Jimmy McAleer is drawing down $10,000 for managing a team in the National capital, which can give a run-me-ns exhibition of the game never equalled upon this continent, when duty calls, which is pretty much all the time, and Sir Walter is very tired of being shown off as the prize animal of the weird Senatorial menagerie.

NEW WORLD RECORD IN DUCKPIN GAME

BROCKTON, Jan. 25.—Rolling in competition on the Crescent alleys, Ray Burr, a member of the Crescent team of the Brockton City Duckpin League, has established a world's record for three strings of ducks, 500. His scores were 205, which is the world's record for a single string, 167 and 137. His performance was watched by over 100 people, and is the most remarkable exhibition of bowling ever seen in this city. In the City League last night, Jimmy O'Neill, rolling with the Crescents, established a State record of 4 duck pins in a league match, hitting the kindling for 418.

EAST TO MEET WEST ON THE GRIDIRON

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Jan. 25.—Gridiron contests between the Middle West and the East will be a feature of the football schedule for 1911. Director of Athletics Bursiaw of the University of Michigan admitted to-day that upon his recent eastward trip he arranged games for Ann Arbor with Pennsylvania, Brown and Princeton. Official announcement of the schedules will probably be made on Saturday. It is understood that the Princeton game will be played November 30 at Princeton.

BARRY WHIPS SANDY IN A COMEDY BOUT

Matchmakers who are on the lookout for the rough stuff can get the real goods by matching Sandy Ferguson of Chelsea and Jim Barry of Chicago.

Incidentally theatrical promoters who are seeking an act that can pull the money from the public by the "screen" route can get the forrest-karit kind if they engage the services of the above mentioned gentlemen.

Barry and Ferguson mixed it up in the main bout at the Armory Club last night, and the "battle" they put up given them the necessary credentials to go with the Follies or "stars" in some show where the so-called boxing fans want to see a rough house.

The late Marquis Queensberry would have certainly faded away quick if he knew that the game had deteriorated as much. Sandy and Jim did about everything in their bout at the Armory except to bite, gouge and kick. Otherwise it was a pleasant contest.

It is hard to tell who was the worst offender. Jim seemed to feel that it was real class to mugg Sandy with his glove, while the "Plumbers Only," used to be done in drawing-room etiquette, came across with things that even the late Marquis never thought of.

It was a pity, but to those who want to see good boxing bouts. It was a swell show for those who like the rough stuff.

There never lived a comical manager who could stage the climaxes to better advantage than Sandy and Barry did last night. There were climaxes galore; yes, there were sub-climaxes—whatever that means. The real choice climax came in the last round, when both men toppled through the ropes. Sandy's beam shot toward the floor, but one of the members kindly intercepted the downward passage of Alex McLean's "wonder," and helped Sandy get away from the board and back into the ring. Barry did not spring the floor, but came very near it. All of this description shows that it was one fine bout—nit, nor.

As a "White Man's hope," Sandy showed he is as far removed from being the candid kid as Cook was from the North Pole. He put up a pluckey fight at times, but he was awfully bad on the rough-house tactics.

There was no time in the bout that Sandy had a decided advantage. True, he landed some stiff left jabs to Barry's face, but they did not seem to jar the lad from Chicago. Whenever Ferguson did put over one the Chicago lad would step in and push his right glove into Sandy's stomach with such vengeance that a little lot of the members thought that he was trying to get a subway through the "Stubborn One."

Mr. Barry also had a very nice method of trying to put Mr. Ferguson to sleep, at angle of seventy-five degrees from his body. His mugged Sandy repeatedly and he used his glove to such excellent advantage that Sandy's thorax was stretched twice its length.

One thing Sandy was very proficient in and that was his "ability" to drive his opponent to the ropes. Whenever the Chelsea "wonder" got a chance he would bore down on Barry and the next thing that the Chicago gent knew he was up against the ropes with his back starting to cut him in two. It hurt all right, but as Mr. Barry has no love for Mr. Ferguson he did not scowl or even smile. He just waited, hoping that he would get a real chance. But the chance never came—principally because Sandy's rushes always upset the calculations of the boy.

It was a show that tickled a whole lot of the members. It was also a show that jarred the "high browns." True, there was not a mark on either man when they quit the ring, but it was a bout that does not do a whole lot to elevate the boxing game.

A small attendance of members showed what the fans think of the pair.

LAST NIGHT'S BOUTS.

Young Dyson of Boston knocked out Willie Houck of Philadelphia at New York in the seventh round of a scheduled ten-round bout.

Kid Henry knocked out Sailor Burke at Albany in the fifth round.

Honey Melody and Paddy Lavin fought a draw in Buffalo. Honey was unable to judge distance and was outpointed, but received even honors.

Young Rosan knocked out Fighting Johnnie Alles in the eleventh round at New London. The fight was stopped by the referee.

SKATING CHAMPION TO RACE AT ARENA

Allen I. Blanchard, founder and president of the International Skating Union, which controls the speed and fancy skating in the United States and Canada, is to visit Boston. He has conducted the present series of skating races which are to make such a stir in Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit, and he will enter contests at the Arena in Montreal at the ice Palace carnival.

The Lanny of Saranac Lake, the American champion, Richard Gunderman, Chicago; Ross Brooks, another Canadian, besides the best from the Western cities.

Mr. Blanchard will bring these fine specimens to Boston on January 31, to compete in an international meet to be held at the Arena on that date.

SOUTH PAWS WILL GIVE WHITE A CLOSE RUN

CHICAGO, Jan. 25.—Manager Duffy of the White Sox has made a small team that is well equipped with southpaw material when the squad departs from here February 28 for Mineral Wells, Texas. The Whites will be compelled to look to his laurels if these lads prove what they are cracked up to be. They are Jesse Baker and George Farthing. The former comes from the Pacific coast league, while George Farthing hails from Lincoln, of the Western league. Baker signed a contract some time ago, while Farthing came in to-day with Jimmy Block. The two will have another side-wheeler in the person of Young Cy Young, who signed last week.

BOXING NEWS AND GOSSIP

Both Frankie Burns and Digger Stanley, who will meet in an international bout Friday evening, are training for the fight at their camps, in New Jersey and is training at Jimmy DePrest's place in Jersey City. Stanley is training at Phil Morey as a sparring partner. Both of the New York fight experts predict a new K. O. will be added to Burns's record. Stanley has also been training near Philadelphia, his quarters being at the home of Jimmy Duffy, the old Quincy and all hands claim that he is a second Jim Corbett.

New York fans became giddy when that fearless little scrapper Mickey Doyle was to fight K. O. Brown to-night, but became suddenly ill and left for the land of nod. Mickey is all smiles for the fight and declares he is called on account of the fact that he is going to put Young Brown to sleep for the count of nine. Doyle is the best kind of a fighter, the K. O. kid getting his share of the purse, and the fans get their money's worth.

Wonder what the Attell Brothers, Abe and Monte, are saving up their money for. They are the boys who have been reported that they have reached in all parts of the country by fighting hang. Abe is the greatest staller in the game to-day and can stave his opponents so cleverly that they don't know what has happened to them. Monte is the kid that the local boy in the ring thing and they will flock out here to see the fighting boys are matched again in a few weeks.

Jimmy Gardner is in training for his match with Knox at the Armory A. C. on January 31. This is the second time that the two have met, and if the bout is the same as their previous one and the outcome is the same, Jimmy will have a right to call for a match with Knox and claim the middleweight title.

One-round Hogan is out for another K. O. Friday. He is to meet Frank Burns, a good lightweight of Oakland, in a three-round bout at the Broadway A. C. of San Francisco. So confident are the fans in Hogan's ability that they bet $500 on their chances. Ta little fishes.

Gus Marcus, the Greek middleweight, is the "white hope," will have another chance to annex the New England middleweight title when he meets Mike Schryer out in Oklahoma and the pennant boys will have a chance to see a real fistic battle.

Young Kriss will have a good opportunity to show his wares at Boston on January 31, when he meets Parker McFarland in a six-round bout. Kriss is a clever boxer and has a fair punch, so he will have a great chance to outpoint the young City Hall boy.

Harry Lewis and Jimmy Summers fight a twenty-round battle to-night at the Lenox A. C. Meinfeld's Club. This is the first time the boys have met and Harry is rated a slight favorite.

OLD RIVALS BATTLE IN WRESTLING BOUT

Jim Smart and Sam Anderson meet on the mat at the Columbia Theatre to-night. Anderson, although giving away weight, has been looking for a match with Smart for some time, but as Jim has been abroad the past two years, the bout could not be arranged. Anderson has the notoriety, but Smart has the weight, and knows how to make use of it. Smart is very aggressive and roughs it considerably, but Anderson is no novice at these tactics. Smart has met men of the calibre of Lundin, Caramelli, Ryan and Hackenschmidt, and who stayed with Zbyszko for an hour last month without being thrown.

ALEX WILSON "PRO" AT MILWAUKEE CLUB

MILWAUKEE, Jan. 25.—The Milwaukee Country Club, the leading golfing organization of this State, has engaged Alex Wilson as its professional for the coming season, succeeding Alex Roberts, son. Wilson is to be at Westward Ho the coming season. Wilson was formerly assistant to Willie Marshall at the Onwentsia Club.

BOWLING ALLEY NEWS

It was the universal opinion about the bowling alleys that Paul Goeller is now travelling at his best. The Pole has been rolling in such form as an average of 100 I 10 every stranger since he started in the City League series. He has been at last. Harvey Hintze was not up to the bowling of his team-mate, and Goeller had a walkaway with the high average prize, being the first time in the course of the series that he has been high in the City League. Hintze was second.

In the Boston Bankers' League the pool matches come to-morrow night when Thorp, Martin Co., meet Berry & Co., W. H. McElwain, Leyden Adams, Clothing & Plater, and Bonsal, Ward Co., meet the Carter Dal Co. The interesting sport is looked for.

Jack Smith says that if the Boston pins ever take the place of the candlepins he has in mind a join that he will start. He says that there is no reason why it won't bother with his new system. Jack is the boy that rolled the alley record: 128, 120, 134, 129 and 1301 the other night.

Down in Worcester the bugs claim that the match between the Moosers and Maidens was only a forerunner of what may be expected later, as other Worcester teams are in a position to arrange matches with Boston teams.

Cherrington, of Salem rolled a couple of good strings in his last time out in the Metcalfe League, getting 113 and 114. Bad trades and losing a couple of games made his third string so.

SPORTS of all SORTS

DO YOU REMEMBER PAT MURPHY, the old-time ball player who retired from outfield berth with the New York Giants in the Buck Ewing days," said an old-time baseball fan at Tom McCarthy's Cafe. "Well, he was one of the best comedians in tying his ball to the white picket fence that I ever saw. When he joined the Giants Pat did not hit very well and declared that the advertising signs on one of the fences in centre field reflected the sun in such a way as to sadly affect his batting lamps. John B. Day was president of the New York club, and as he had great faith in Murphy the "nuts" upon the fence through which he batted. The next day after the advertising contract had been cancelled and the sign whipped. Pat fanned four times off John Clarkson. If I remember right Pat Murphy's day with the Giants was one week in duration."

"I THINK A SHORT END BET ON Frankie Burns to beat Digger Stanley, the overrated English lover, is one of the best bets that I have known in several years," said a well-known sport who is going to take a flyer on Burns," said a sporting man at the Copley Plaza Hotel bar. "This fellow Stanley has a splendid outfit in both hands, is clever on his pedals, has a wonderful knowledge of fighting and I can see no way where he can lose. Burns is one of the boosted fistic marvel from over the herring pond. I like it right well and will back my judgment to the limit on it down and across the board, if the odds are refused according to present form."

THE STORY OF OLD MAN PALmerty of Lowell, who raised a dog from the stuff in his yard whenever his steady boys, Martin and Joe, brought home the bacon at the most enthusiastic surgeons and amateur reluncheon of Greater Boston and always a splendid sponsor of the sport. Mr. Johnson says that his retirement is actuated mutually by considerations of health and business. It is to be earnestly hoped that in selling his trotters he is only taking a temporary layoff of his sport.

TOM NEEDHAM, THE GAZELLE OF the diamond, has sent in his signed contract with the Chicago Cubs. When Tom was with the coming season, playing on the South End grounds, when he started to go around the circuit he had a wad which there was generally time enough for the thirsty ones to leave the ground, empty the bankers and return before Tom took the first pitched ball behind the plate.

THE DOOM OF RACING THE RUNning horse in California appears to be sealed, for the Legislature shows a majority opposed to having the bangtails at Oakland and it is all over but moving in the Jurors' bench. And Jacksonville is not by any means sure for another season. The Juares track in Mexico should be a mint in another year and be the only center of Winter racing.

THERE HAVE BEEN FEW BOXING bouts in Boston on which less money was wagered than that between Sandy Ferguson and Barry at the Armory A. A. last night. With the story of the fight all of them booked to lose the winent of the local sporting men were content to let last night's contest alone.

ROLLER MUST FIGHT TOE HOLD

Zbyszko the big Polish wrestler is on record in his declaration that the toe hold will not be barred in next Saturday's match as proposed by Dr. Ben Holler.

Jack Herman, manager of the foreigner, and to-day that the ban be have suggested this was when the articles of agreement were under consideration, and not after the details had been signed and the forfeits posted.

Herman can see the hold if he wishes, said Herman, but Zbyszko will probably with if he can get it. In Europe the hold is prohibited and there is no reason why it should not be allowed to go here.

If we see to start with barring the toe hold there is no telling when some wrestler will insist on cutting out the scissors and everything else except the stacking of cards.

CLOSING DAY AT MONTREAL RACES

The present meeting of the Montreal ice races, closes to-day, with a feature of especial interest, the five-mile dash. In which a splendid field of horses are sure to take the starter's word. It would be hard to conceive of anything finer in the Winter racing game than to see the field of horses named swing ten times around the course at top speed, and there will be some speculation go across to-day, well worthy of this novel event. The 2:20 pace looks good from every angle, with a nice field going up to the wire, and there should be some swell selling of field tickets against the favorites, Knight Onward.

Entries and selections are as follows:

Five-mile dash: Bert Nuthurst, Mary Bois, Pitt Burns, Jay Billy, Conduct, Enchanted, Prince Greenleaf, Jr., Lucas, Colonel Taylor, Edna D. This is a swingstake event, in which a field ticket looks the best, against whoever is chosen as the popular favorite at race time.

2:20 pace: Maude Girl, Black Mary, Jap, Knight Onwards, Rhetta, Lady Ola, Dan Fisher, Hat 0, Linda Lee, Redding-ton, Master Rose, Fern Hal, Texas Jay, Jennie Ha, Mac Regent, Major Adam, Pan-ola, Knight Onwards looks the best of the field, and should be returned the winner.

Just a Wife

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHE was a good wife—there was nothing unusual in that.

She looked upon her husband as a demi-god—there was nothing unusual in that.

He looked upon himself as an absolute god, and there was nothing unusual in that.

For fifteen years she had been a perfect wife and mother, living absolutely for her home and family, thinking only of their welfare and happiness.

She demanded little in return for her loving service, and the family had come to take it for granted and to enjoy the belief that constant self-sacrifice was mother's pleasure.

Then, one day, as gently and sweetly as she had lived, the mother died.

The funeral had been in the morning, and toward nightfall a steady, dreary rain set in.

The husband had wandered down to his office in the afternoon from sheer force of habit. It was closed since she died, and he sat there idly turning over a bundle of letters on whose contents he could not concentrate his attention.

Afterthoughts

He thought of the fifteen years they had spent together, as man and wife, and it passed through his mind that perhaps he had not been quite the perfect husband that he had always considered him self to be.

"I suppose I've been as good as most husbands," he thought, uncomfortably. "But I wonder if I was good enough for her."

Oh, well, it was all over now, and he must make the best of things. There were the children to think of; he would go home to them now; they must feel as forlorn as he, poor little mites.

As he entered the front door he found himself listening for the cheery call that always greeted his homecoming.

Dreary silence—that sweet welcoming voice was hushed forever.

With a sigh he turned into the parlor. It was dark and he stumbled over a footstool on his way to press the electric light button.

What were the servants thinking of to have the house in darkness at this hour. It had never happened before.

The fire that always blazed cheerily on the open fireplace had been allowed to die out and his own particular chair had been pulled away from the table by which it always stood.

There had always been a lighted lamp on that table and his favorite evening paper.

Reminiscences

He looked about the dreary room with a dull throb of misery. Was it always going to be like this?

This room had always been a perfect nest of cozy comfort. She had known so well how to make a room pretty and comfortable.

On a table at the other side of the fireplace, was a basket filled with half-finished mending.

There was Bobbie's stocking, with the darning egg in it, just as she had showed it to him the night before she was taken ill.

"Bobbie is getting to be such a great strong boy," she had said, with tender pride. "He keeps me half my time mending his things."

With tear-blurred eyes and clumsy, unsteady fingers, he picked up the stocking, the last sign of her loving ministration.

He wandered forlornly upstairs. Where were the children, he wondered.

A child's laugh rang out and his first feeling was of angry protest that any one could laugh.

Then they are young and will soon forget," he thought miserably, "and I must bear this loneliness by myself."

He turned into their room, the room he and she had shared for fifteen years. There in the closet, hung the pretty pink wrapper she had always worn when she did her hair.

With a sobbing sigh he buried his face in its silken folds—the sweet fragrance of her still clung to it.

He paced slowly up and down the room, which henceforth must be his alone.

That worn place in the carpet—he remembered that she had wanted a new carpet last Easter, but he had said they couldn't afford it; and then he had bought a very expensive fur-lined coat for himself, and she had been delighted that he should be so comfortable.

In a sudden fit of unendurable misery he walked over to the window and flung it open.

Comprehension

It was raining hard and, with a groan, he remembered how she had always hated the rain.

Hatted it, and to-night she was lying out under that rain-soaked sod—all alone, his pretty, pretty girl.

He moved blindly back to the bedside. Where were his slippers, he wondered? She always had them ready for him.

As he kicked off his shoes a thing absurdly pathetic upset him utterly.

There was a hole in the toe of his stocking; such a thing had not happened during his fifteen years of married life.

She wouldn't have let it happen.

With a hoarse sob of misery he cried: "I cannot bear it. I cannot live without her."

When, a few minutes later, he answered the summons of his dinner gong, he found the children at the table, a subdued, little sad-faced group.

He sat down opposite the empty chair.

"Children," he said, "I want to tell you that you have lost the best mother and I the best wife that ever lived, and we did not half appreciate her."

And out in the silence and the rain the little mother slept peacefully.

Appreciation had come too late to disturb her placid rest.

The Manicure Lady

She Reads up Some on Books of Travel

"HAVE you ever read many of them books of travel, George?" asked the Manicure Girl, as she adjusted the barette above her medulla oblongata and peered into her hand mirror. "I think, as long as anybody has got to read, they ought really to read only them things which tends to make the intellect more. Don't you?"

"I ain't gave it much thought," replied the Head Barber. "I never did care much, though, for books of travel. The only book of travel that I ever read clean through is a railroad timetable. I'm too busy to read much, kiddo, and you can take it from me that it ain't too strong for believing what I see in them timetables."

"I think you ought to improve your mind every time you have a chance, George," said the Manicure Lady. "We ain't here for long, goodness knows, and I think that for them few fleeting moments we linger, we ought to get all the knowledge we can.

"That's one thing I admire about Brother Wilfred. With all the slips the poor boy makes, he sure is persevering, and if he don't succeed at last, it won't be because he doesn't dig into the books and try to learn all the wisdom possible.

"He's studying chemistry now, and working at it like a beaver. Yesterday he touched the old gent for $10. After he had it in his pocket, he told dad that he wanted it for the necktie of a laboratory, but I think the way the old gent looked at him, he thought Wilfred was planning more on the necktie of a distillery. And he told the kid that it was the last 'ten' for a whopping long time to come.

"But I am all the time getting away from my subject, George. What I started out to tell was about books of travel. Gee, I picked up one last night, it was about a gent named Henry Stanley on never get nowhere."

the trail of David Livingstone, and would you believe me, George, I stuck to that book for a solid half hour.

"It was awful interesting, all about the Congo and the jungles and the gorillas and sprinsjeks and the rest of them big snakes, and it told how he met the native chief of a big village who gave him a string or beads, after which the native rubbed noses with him.

"They always rub noses with you over there, the book said, to show that they are grateful. That's why I wouldn't take no presents along if I ever went to Africa. The way it seems to me, George, about the third time you had a coon chief rub his nose against yours you would stop being a philanthropist.

"Oh, well, I suppose some people was born to travel, and some was born to stay at home, but I get mighty lonesome sometimes when I am sitting here waiting for customers to come in and have their nails did; and wish that I could journey to some of them coral strands where every prospect pleases and all the men is vile.

"Why is it, George, that some of us has to stand and wait, while the others gets chances to go to the far parts of the world, and to come back home and write books about their travels? Oh, if I just had a really good chance to go out and see the whole world! You don't know how weary I get sitting here, listening to a lot of fresh boneheads whispering, 'Oh, you kid!' I think some of these days I will make a trip, if I have to shoot myself and take the long leap to the sky."

"You're young yet, kid," soothed the Head Barber. "Cheer up, maybe you'll marry a traveling man."

"If I did," said the Manicure Lady, "that would be my finish. Then I would

Simplified Housekeeping

By WINIFRED BLACK

DEAR WINIFRED BLACK:

It does make me laugh to read some of the excuses that women give for refusing to go into housekeeping. By the main one being the labor of washing dishes three times each day. The remedy is very easy. Buy dishes enough to last you for a month, and let half of them get dirty, a few each day for two weeks, or even for a whole month; then, when half of them are dirty, or the whole, put them into a dishpan or washtub with soap suds, and wash all at one time.

It is only a small cash outlay to buy a large stock of crockery, and my method of dealing with the dish-washing problem saves much time and temper, especially if you are in a hurry to go out right after meals.

I keep my bachelor home with another bachelor on that principle. We do our cooking whenever we are hungry; and we do our dish-washing whenever we feel like doing it; and the current of our lives runs smoothly and happily without being compelled to hire any female help.

Perhaps some of those married women who write to you might take the hint and be less afraid of housekeeping work by knowing how to manage it so easily. Yours respectfully, BACHELOR.

THERE, now, sisters, aren't you ashamed of yourselves—making all this fuss about washing a few dishes. Why, it's as simple as forgetting to wash your hands, isn't it; and then what's the use of being fussy about a little dirt or a dish or two, anyway? It's all rubbish; just a silly feminine fad, this idea of washing dishes every time you use them. Dogs never complain about the sort of dish on which their bones are served; why shouldn't we finicky two-legged of women learn to have at least the good, plain common sense of an ordinary dog?

And then there's the dusting and the sweeping and the scrubbing and the window-washing—all nonsense, all foolishly wasted energy.

Collars—never wear one in the house; just put on a quilted dressing gown and make it do for a house dress and kitchen apron and a reception frock as well.

Meals at regular hours—nothing but a fad; what you want to do is to eat when you're hungry and drink when you're dry, like poor happy-go-lucky. What's the use of cooking, anyhow, with a delicatessen shop and hundreds of neat little paper bags right in the very same block?

Thanks, thanks from the heart, Dear Bachelor; you have thrown the light of your giant intellect upon this problem which tires and confuses so many, many women, and, lo, the tangled skein is straightened!

It is such missionaries as you who come to us from humble places and teach us the plain, simple path of plain, simple duty.

Progress—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

LET there be many windows to your soul,
That all the glory of the universe
May beautify it. Not the narrow pane
Of one poor creed can catch the radiant rays
That shine from countless sources. Tear away
The blinds of superstition; let the light
Pour through fair windows broad as Truth itself
And high as God.

Why should the spirit peer
Through some man-curtained orifice, and grope
Along dim corridors of doubt, when all
The splendor from unfathomed seas of space
Might bathe it with the golden waves of Love?
Sweep up the debris of decaying faiths;
Sweep down the cobwebs of worn-out beliefs.
And throw your soul wide open to the light
Of Reason and of Knowledge. Tune your ear
To all the wordless music of the stars
And to the voice of Nature, and your heart
Shall turn to truth and goodness, as the plant
Turns to the sun. A thousand unseen hands
Reach down to help you to their peace-crowned heights,
And all the forces of the firmament
Shall fortify your strength. Be not afraid
To thrust aside half-truths and grasp the whole.

Japanese Fan Fight

ONE of the best of the new games is the Japanese fan fight. Let the players divide into two sides. Each side must have a den. The dens are made by curtain over a large sheet of cardboard at each end of the room. Stretch a tape across the middle of the room, and on it place one feather for every two people. Have feathers of different colors, and give each player a Japanese fan; with the word that each is to be ready for the fight.

Let the two sides now face one another on either side of the tape, two opposing players being opposite each feather. At a given signal the fight begins. The object is to waft the feathers into their opponent's den. When a feather is blown into a den he who loses it pays a forfeit, and he and his conqueror are onlookers until the end.

Den keepers are appointed and have a lively time keeping the dens from being invaded. If Japanese fans and feathers are not available, pieces of colored tissue paper may be substituted for the feathers and folded newspapers for the fans.

MADAME X

A Great Emotional Story of Mother Love, Novelized by J. W. McConaughy by Special Arrangement With Henry W. Savage from Alexandre Bisson's Powerful Drama. Copyright, 1910, by the H. K. Fly Co

THE jurors were leaning forward, their eyes fastened on his face, and their reasons hypnotized by the musical, confident voice.

"When one or other of these reasons is brought forward, justice may be tempered with mercy. But how can you be asked to find excuses for an act the motive of which the prisoner refuses to disclose? By this very refusal we may be forgiven for believing—nay, we are almost forced to believe that they are the most possible motives. Myself, for my part, the impenetrable mystery in which the prisoner has robed herself, and I can feel no pity for a guilty woman whose lips have not uttered a word of repentance!"

A loud, clear voice rang suddenly and sharply through the court.

"I will speak presently!"

A burst of laughter would not have been more disconcerting. M. Valmorin stopped, and every eye in the court was on the prisoner. Half of the men in the crowd room had started to their feet. The attitude and the look of suffering on the dark, hunted eyes were not visibly changed, but it was undoubtedly the woman who had spoken. The prosecutor bit his lip. Ten seconds before he had read in every eye in the jury-box, and in nearly every face in the courtroom, a placid acquiescence. Now there was pity in the glance of more than one of the twelve who would judge his case, and he would have to win them away from it. This would be harder than gaining their confidence at the outset had been.

The usher hammered the top of his desk until the excitement died away and there was order in court once more. Then M. Valmorin began the work of repairing the blunder.

"As I was saying, gentlemen of the jury, we know nothing about the woman Laroque," he continued calmly, as if he considered of little importance the sensation that accompanied the dramatic interruption. "We have found no proof that she was ever a resident of France.

"In Buenos Ayres it is not known where she came from. During her stay in South America she did not, so far as we can learn, offend any of the laws of the country. In the month of March she took passage on board the Amason for Bordeaux.

Nothing particular was marked about her during the trip, excepting that she told the fortunes of the passengers with a deck of cards—that she said she was certain she would die before long, and that she was in a great hurry to get back to France. This is all we know about her past.

A Frightful Shriek

"On the afternoon of April 3 she arrived at the Hotel of the Three Crowns, and at half-past five she killed her lover—a man whose past will not bear scrutiny, and who had been sentenced for theft on two occasions. You have heard the evidence of the servant with reference to the over-excitement of the prisoner. I will draw no conclusion from this evidence, nor is it necessary to go into the question of the prisoner's moral responsibility, which overexcitement—caused by drink—may have affected. I will leave this phase of the case to my friend, the counsel for the defence—Maitre Raymond Florlot——"

A frightful, unearthly shriek drowned the soothing voice of the prosecutor and brought every man and woman in the courtroom, palefaced and startled, to their feet. Several women screamed, and the others stared, frightened, at the prisoner. She was standing, rigid and swaying, head raised and eyes closed, her stiffened arms held close to her sides, her hands opening and closing convulsively. Two gendarmes seized her and tried to force her back into her seat.

"My God! My God!" she shrieked again and again. Raymond was beside her in a moment, his hand on her arm, begging her to be calm.

"For God's sake! Stop torturing that woman!" roared a man's voice from the audience.

It was the signal for a pandemonium! The usher pounded on his desk until the boards cracked, but the crowd lurched forward against the railing in a terrific uproar.

"Let her alone!"

"She's dying!"

"Great God! It's Jacqueline! It's Florlot's wife!" shouted Noel in Dr. Chenney's ear. And the next moment that elderly payal clan was over the railing like a boy. He burst through the gendarmes and rushed over to the dock. But Jacqueline was again in her seat and waved him back. He and Raymond bent over her.

"Are you ill? Shall I ask for an adjournment?" they asked breathlessly.

"No! No! No!" she panted, "I'm all right—all right!"

Her eyes were still closed and her lips worked as if she were trying to speak. Dr. Chenney's fingers closed over her left wrist. He leaned over and whispered reassuring words in her ear and gently patted her shoulder. The subtle magnetism of the physician seemed to have its effect at last and she slowly opened her eyes and sat up.

The din in the courtroom died as suddenly as it had begun, and the spectators shamefacedly sought their seats under the blazing eyes of the President.

He was livid with anger.

"This is the most disgraceful scene that ever stained a French court!" he cried in a voice that trembled with suppressed rage. "If there is another sound from the benches during these proceedings I will order the gendarmes to clear the hall!"

Would She Speak?

Noel glanced at his friend in his seat behind the judges to see if he, too, had recognized "the woman Laroque."

Florlot's face was buried in his hands. He pressed a handkerchief so tightly to his eyes that Noel fancied he could see the whiteness of the nails. Any great blow—mental or physical—is immediately followed by a practically complete cessation of all activity of the senses. The mind—if it works at all—revolves around singular and ridiculous trifles, utterly foreign to the disaster or its effect. It was this condition that the recognition of Jacqueline left her husband. He was conscious that quiet had been restored and that Valmorin was continuing his speech, but the scene and its actors seemed remote from his life.

"As for the reason of the crime," the prosecutor was saying, "I repeat that we do not know it. Now that the prisoner has promised to speak, we may learn what it was."

Speak!—would she speak!—Raymond was standing half facing the prosecutor, his profile toward the room. His right hand rested on the top of the railing in front of the dock. Jacqueline's eyes were on his handsome head, and in them there was unutterable love and unutterable dread. His delicate nostrils were quivering, and a touch of color came and went in his cheeks. He was watching Valmorin with keen, anxious eyes. Timidly, as a child, her hand crept out and closed softly over his fingers. He glanced up at her quickly, with what was meant to be a reassuring smile, but the early stage fright was returning. The prosecutor was nearing the end of his speech and in a few moments he must rise to reply. She drew her hand away, and he looked from it to the woman he loved, unmanned as if something unspeakable had happened.

* * *

An invisible bond that has never been measured by our mortal standards binds mother and child together. It, alone of earthly ties, takes no count of time or space, and joy and degradation and wealth and want and woe alike are powerless to loosen. It has been called the only unselfish love, but it is not that. Even "damned in body and soul," the boy clings to his mother as to a promise of absolution; and a mother, dying in shame and sorrow, dies "even in her child—immortality!"

* * *

"Never! Never!"

As if it had needed but that touch of the fingers to draw the cord tightly around his heart, Raymond felt for a moment that his soul was going out to the wretched woman that he had never seen until that day. Emotions that he had never known were stirred to life. A desire to take her in his arms almost overpowered him. And what it meant to the mother only a mother may know. "Speak!" She would commit a thousand murders and go a thousand times to execution rather than utter a single word!

"You, gentlemen of the jury, will weigh in the balance her sincerity and repentance with her guilt, and let your conscience be the judge of what punishment is proportionate to the crime she has committed."

There was a rustle and low murmur of whispered conversation as M. Valmorin resumed his seat.

"I don't think much of M. the Public Prosecutor," muttered M. Fernand Merivel nodded his acquiescence without taking his eyes off the woman behind the railing. The prisoner was huddled over in the front of the dock, sobbing violently. The President glanced at her with pity in his eyes.

"Woman Laroque, will you answer my questions now?" he asked, kindly. She did not seem to hear.

"You said a few minutes ago that you would speak."

Jacqueline raised her wet, anguish-stricken face and held out both hands, as if warding off a blow.

"No! Never! Never!" she cried, wildly, and sank down again.

"Take time for reflection, and let me, for the last time, advise you not to remain obstinate!" persisted the judge.

The only reply was a storm of weeping that shook the dock. Murmurs of pity rose again and the usher rapped for silence. Then he said severely:

"Counsel for the defense," called the President.

To Be Continued To-morrow.

To Develop the Bust

To the Beauty Editor: Can you tell me of any harmless way to increase the bust? I do not want any more flesh on my hips or other parts of my body, but I am so flat-chested I would try anything that would give me a full, rich bust. Can you? ETHEL W.

The only thing I know of that will develop the bust without increasing the size of the hips, or without putting on flesh where not needed, is a prescription given by Dr. Kelly, who is a specialty for small and undeveloped breasts. It is the discovery of a woman physician whose practice was largely among women, and in most cases increases the bust measure four to six inches in a month. Send me to the Dr. Kelly Co., Dept. 27 A. T., Buffalo, N. Y., and they will send you a trial package of the treatment without charge. This is said to be of the greatest benefit to undeveloped development of the bust and will give a full, beautiful form without anyone knowing that the treatment was used.

Many mothers have told me that after the baby has been weaned, the breasts become flabby and shrunken, but the use of Dr. Kelly's prescription made them full and firm. Do not use pads or bust forms, as they never look natural and have a bad effect upon the general health. Neither would I recommend ordinary flesh builders of tonics, as they increase the hips and thighs and with the result often the form should be slender everywhere except a generously developed bust.

YOU ARE IN MY POWER, ROSAMOND. I'LL BACK TO THE WRECK AND GET MY REVENGE ON YOUR LOVER, CLAUDE!
I'LL TAKE THIS UNCONSCIOUS BURGHERO FROM THE DINING CAR INTO THE PULLMAN. MY RED CROSS BADGE COMES IN HANDY!
PULL
(NO 7)
SMOTHER 'R DEATH NOW CLAUDE ECLAIRE NOBODY WILL BE IN THIS BERTH 'TILL EVENING.
THAT CURLY HEADED VARMINT AIN'T GOIN' TO GIT AWAY WITHOUT BILLY AND ME!
SAVE!
DID YOU RING, SAH?
YOU WON'T BE ON THE TRAIN WILL HAVE TO MAKE UP YOUR LOVE TIME AND YOU WILL DIE!
YOU CUR!

Every man who wears a red cross on his sleeve is not necessarily a physician. He may be, and in this case he is, a crook. That badge is a mere subterfuge, or, as we highbrows say, a "stall," which the villain has put on in order that he may carry Rosamond away from the scene of the wreck without being interfered with.

Not satisfied with stealing Rosamond, Desmond goes back to make sure of Claude. The cur is afraid some one may come along and dig our hero out of the wreckage, which might upset the villain's plans. He'd like to bat Claude over the head with a coupling pin, but he doesn't dare. People might think it queer to see a physician do a thing like that.

So he drags Claude into the sleeping car and puts him into an upper berth and closes it up. If you have ever chanced to be in a folding bed when it took a notion to fold up, you will be able to appreciate our hero's feelings. But don't go and try it just on that account. We refuse to be responsible for the consequences if you do.

The dining car waiter is worried. Claude forgot to tip him, and a waiter hates to lose a tip, wreck or no wreck. Not finding our hero in the diner, he starts to search the train. Ordinarily we hate to see any one show a mercenary spirit, but in this case it may be a good thing for Claude Eclaire. We will now pass on to the next car.

When the waiter enters the sleeping car he hears the sound of a bell from upper 7. Opening the berth, he finds our hero frantically pushing the button with his foot. When Desmond thrust Claude in there, he evidently forgot about those push buttons. The moments of great excitement one is apt to forget trifles like that.

You wouldn't expect a high-class villain like Desperate Desmond to pull off an old stunt like tying the heroine to the railroad track. But he had no time to think of anything original. In to-morrow's pictures Rosamond will be rescued, of course, but we haven't decided how to turn the trick. It will cost you one cent to find out.

Seeking Beauty

By WILLIAM H. DAVIS

COLD winds can never freeze, nor thunder roar
The cup of cheer that beauty draws for me
Out of these azure heavens and this green earth—
I drink and drink, and thirst the more I see.

To see the dewdrops thrill the blades of grass
Makes my whole body shake; for here's my choice
Of either sun or shade, and both are green—
A chaffinch laughs in his melodious voice.

Then banks are stormed by speedwell, that blue flower
So like a little heaven with one star out;
I see an amber lake of buttercups,
And hawthorn foams the hedges round about.

The old oak tree looks now so green and young,
That even swallows perch awhile and sing;
This is that time of year, no sweet and warm,
When bats wait not for stars ere they take wing.

As long as I love beauty I am young.
Am young or old as I love more or less;
When beauty is not heeded or seems stale,
My life's a cheat, let death end my distress.

"That he never lends money but he borrows trouble."

How to Prevent Hard Times

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

IT is in your power to prevent Hard Times.

Speaking to me? Yes, to you. You can prevent Hard Times by doing your share every day toward making Good Times.

If every laborer, boss, clerk, merchant and banker would do this, there could be no bad times. When every man is tending to his job and spreading cheerfulness, he is making good times.

If you do not believe this—laborer, boss, or clerk—then stay away from your job two or three days, look gloomy, make others feel gloomy, and you will find Hard Times sitting at the table with you and your family, shadowing your footsteps around the house, and creeping silently to bed with you.

This is the way to make Hard Times at home—privately, so to speak.

Sometimes a few men get together and declare that money is tight, credit is gone, securities are of no value. They look gloomy, spread gloom, and talk gloom.

This is the way to make Hard Times, publicly, so to speak.

II.

Now, what are the facts back of Hard Times?

The first fact is that NO MONEY HAS BEEN DESTROYED.

All the money that existed just before the Hard Times came on is still in the world.

The second fact is that everybody is scared nearly to death about something. Men are like a group of savages in the presence of an eclipse. They do not realize that an eclipse IS A SHADOW, A SHADOW THAT IS PASSING.

Hence the second fact of Hard Times is Fear.

Fear is a mental state or condition So are Hard Times.

III.

It seems clear, then, that every one of us is in honor bound to contribute to our associates every day, all the optimism we can. Optimism is the opposite of pessimism. The one means a belief and confidence in good things; the other a belief in everything that is bad. Optimism is a belief in the Sun. Pessimism is a belief that the shadow on the Sun has destroyed it.

If everybody would contract the habit of optimism, there could be no Hard Times.

But, you say, Hard Times are on us. There is no doubt about it. The situation is serious.

All right.

This is the time, then, to apply the rules; and here they are:

Keep on talking Good Times.

Do your share in the way of optimism.

If your neighbor is frightened, counsel him. Before you let go of your optimism, if you count ten slowly, you won't let go at all.

Then remember that when a man laughs he expands his blood vessels and his circulation is fine.

But when he is frightened, every part of his system contracts, and his heart fails to work properly.

When business is good, everything expands and the circulation of money is fine. But when men are frightened about business, money stops circulating and the heart of the business world fails to work.

Therefore, the best thing to do in this work-a-day world of business, is to laugh and spread optimism.

Ballade

By KENNETH HARRIS.

WE often hear complaint
By the improvident,
Infected with the taint
Of wicked discontent.
Most unintelligent,
They will not see the light.
We know what God has meant,
Whatever is, is right.

Because they're sick and faint,
Because their all is spent,
They curse the cruel constraint
And give their malice vent.
They want things different.
Base from their sorry plight;
From this we must dissent.
Whatever is, is right.

Their woes in black they paint,
With brighter hues unblent.
Would we the oldest saint
That e'er to heaven went
It's quite impertinent
To lift time-honored blight.
The notion's pestilent,
Whatever is, is right.

L'ENVOI.

Reformers, mischief bent,
Your talk disgusts us quite
Reflect and then repent,
Whatever is, is right.

Bugles and Jet

BUGLES and jet, which have always been associated in our minds with elegantly gowned old ladies, are now seen ornamenting flippant evening frocks and youthful coiffures. It must be really nice for the bugles and jet to have this cheerful change of environment, and they are very effective.

Seen in a decorative fringe on filmy evening frocks the bugle is lovely. Its graceful pearl like body lends itself admirably as a decorative adjunct to the gown and the mournful charm of jet but enhances the glitter of a bugle. Both are effective as pendant earrings and upon blond coiffures.

"THE GAMBLERS"

The Story of Charles Klein's Greatest Play. A Romance of Society and Financial Life. Novelized by J. W. McConaughy. Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner

Synopsis of Previous Instalments

The story opens at a fashionable wedding in New York. Among the guests is Wilbur Emerson, young banker. He and the bride, Catherine Darwin, have been friends from childhood, but it is not until he sees her married to another that Wilbur realizes that he loves her. Fearing that some of the other guests will notice his mental distress and guess the reason for it, he hastily leaves the church and goes for a long walk in the park, where he can be alone with his thoughts. He decides to try to forget his love for Catherine by plunging with renewed energy into business.

Wilbur's father, John Emerson, is a conservative banker. Wilbur is anxious to deviate the business along modern lines and after much persuasion, obtains his father's consent.

Together with several other financiers, he organizes a chain of banks. The so-called Money Trust, fearing the new concern is becoming too powerful, causes a panic, which threatens to wreck the new enterprise.

Wilbur technically violates the banking laws to enable his chain of banks to weather the financial storm. This becomes known to the government and John Darwin is made special prosecuting attorney to investigate his banking methods. He works on George, brother of Wilbur's partners, and frightens him into making confession.

Darwin learns that his wife is a guest at the Emerson's, and after a scene with her, in which he says he is going to political preferment by convicting the Emersons of crime, takes her home.

Wilbur tells his sister, Isabel, that Darwin has been appointed to investigate their chain of banks.

Later the banking partners meet and pretend to play cards because they are under surveillance of Secret Service men.

Wilbur explains the situation to them and tells them that he has the notes they signed. He says without the notes the prosecution can prove nothing. He tells the partners to pick out their notes and when they do so they discover the notes Wilbur offers them are not the notes they signed, but that they are forgeries.

"This handwriting looks very familiar—very familiar!" His voice was low, with a sub-current of deadly menace. He slowly held the notes up to the light.

"Do—you—recognize—it—Mr. Cowper?"

The traitor started and looked up, terror-stricken. His face was mottled gray and white.

Cowper the Guilty One

"No. I—why—why—should I?" He stammered hurriedly.

Emerson held him with his eye for a few moments and then turned again to the notes.

"This is some of Darwin's work!" he cried bitterly. "I know his methods! He's found the weak spot in our armor. They've secured the originals and substituted these copies—oh, Cowper!"

"I—it looks like it—I suppose so!" Under Emerson's steady gaze he was fast becoming panic-stricken.

"Yes!" said the young man, grimly. Cowper felt that he must appear to take more interest in the situation.

"Let's look—see if your move had been anticipated," he stammered.

"Yes!" said Emerson in the same grim tone.

There was a long pause. Tooker smoked quietly and Raymond feverishly. Old Mr. Emerson took an occasional feeble puff at his cigar. Cowper shivered and squirmed in his chair under Emerson's steady gaze. At last Raymond sprang up with a bitter oath and began pacing about the room.

"If you'd only taken my advice!" he broke, waving his arms excitedly. "If you'd only listened to me—if you'd given the matter more thought—if—if—if—" interrupted Tooker, testily.

"We're in a hole, Raymond," said Emerson, quietly. "There's no use fussing how we got in. The question is—how are we to get out?"

"This is some of Darwin's work!" he cried bitterly. "I know his methods! He's found the weak spot in our armor. They've secured the originals and substituted these copies—oh, Cowper!"

There was a long pause. Tooker smoked quietly and Raymond feverishly. Old Mr. Emerson took an occasional feeble puff at his cigar. Cowper shivered and squirmed in his chair under Emerson's steady gaze. At last Raymond sprang up with a bitter oath and began pacing about the room.

"If you'd only taken my advice!" he broke, waving his arms excitedly. "If you'd only listened to me—if you'd given the matter more thought—if—if—if—" interrupted Tooker, testily.

"My Note Is There"

"That's it!" Tooker chimed in. "Where do we get off?"

"My note is there, too—isn't it?" asked the old man, calmly.

Instead his words were a strong stronger as the realization of the danger grew upon him.

"Yes," replied Wilbur with a groan. "That's it—that's the trouble!"

"That's the hellish part of it."

"It's too bad, Mr. Emerson!" exclaimed Tooker, shaking his head. Now that there seemed to be no chance for any of them, he sincerely sympathized with the clean-hearted old man. "But Mr. Emerson, such stuff in him that men are made of. And after all," he said, with a jaunty smile, "we don't see that I'm in any worse position than the rest of you."

"No, but your case is different," protested his son. "These men are speculators like myself. They knew the cards were taking. You didn't!"

"Neither did I!" snapped Raymond. "That is—not—not thoroughly," he stammered hastily, as he caught a look of pity in the eyes of Tooker and young Emerson. "Oh, but—I—hang Tooker, but the old gentleman stopped him with a gesture.

"The fault is my own!" he said, firmly. "Please don't allow my individual misfortune to add to yours! Let each man face his own folly as the current market price!"

"No!" cried Emerson, determinedly. "Some of us may escape! Why should fly to go to prison? I see a way out of it me four!"

Raymond stopped his walk and hurried back to his seat. Three of them looked up at the leader eagerly. Cowper, alone, turned his head away and suppressed a groan.

"Let one of us assume the entire responsibility," continued Emerson, the excitement of discovery in his voice. "All that the Government is a victim! The politicians at Washington will be satisfied if they can show reformers, Informers and muckrakers that they do send a rich man to prison now and then. Let one take the responsibility and save the others!"

Raymond and Tooker glanced at each other hurriedly. The same thought was in each mind. Who was to be the victim? Who was to sacrifice himself?

"I—I don't know!" demanded the former. "It's a gamble—and I'm out!" said Tooker grimly. "Well, what's the next best gamble?"

"They'd never believe that I"—began Raymond feebly. Tooker saw the quick-ening way.

"You'll draw lots!" he declared.

"Anything you say," said Emerson, with an indifferent shrug.

"The lowest card in the pack," suggested Raymond. He jerked the words out.

"The first jack," offered Tooker.

"Good, what shall it be?" And Emerson drummed the table nervously.

"It makes no difference," said Tooker carelessly, leaning back in his chair. Raymond stared up as the dread swept back over him in a wave.

"Life's a Gamble"

"How can it be done?" he demanded. "Investigation will show that all of us are equally responsible."

Emerson motioned him back to his seat.

"Not if I—But we'll decide that afterward," he said. "Come, do you agree, Tooker?"

Tooker passed his hand across his forehead and squared his shoulders.

"I'll take a chance," he declared, hardly of himself."

Raymond's lips quivered as he stammered:

"Yes! But I don't want to be the victim!"

"Neither do I," commented Tooker, in a low voice, but in a tone that didn't make good. "Life's a gamble, and——" he filled the blanks with a shrug.

Cowper seemed to be afraid to bear either of them.

"Cowper?" he questioned, turning a hard glance on the silent man. The reply was a gulp, and a sob.

"I agree," announced Mr. Emerson, with a steadiness that Cowper strove imitate. "Go ahead!" he exclaimed. The first jack," Tooker—"

"The first jack—is that understood, gentlemen?" asked Emerson soberly. "I'm not going to bets I will assume the sole responsibility——"

The other four nodded. None could trust himself to speak.

"Shuffle the cards, Tooker!"

Every eye watched the uncertain fingers as they mixed and combined the cards. Emerson caught his breath.

"Cut!"

Have you ever watched the horses leap away under the barrier when the last dollar you owned on earth was on the race? Have you ever shoved your last stack of chips into the centre with a four-flush in your hand after you had lost twice as much as you could afford? Have you ever watched the little ball dash hither and thither on the spinning wheel when where it settled would decide whether you would eat or not? If you have, multiply by a thousand your sensations at that moment and you can imagine the feelings and faces of at least four of these five men as they moistened their dry lips and leaned over to gamble for worse than death!

With the Secret Service men in the street outside and the shadow of Atlanta's prison gates across the table!

Tooker tried to deal, but the first card stuck a little and his fingers trembled so that he could not slip it off. He held on the deck to Emerson with a feeble smile.

"Deal! My hands are trembling!" His voice trembled and harsh in the uncanny stillness of the room. "Damned if I don't think I'm nervous. You deal them."

Emerson took the deck and dealt him a card face up. It was an eight-spot. There was a perceptible relaxation in Tooker's rigid shoulders. The next card Emerson dealt himself. He slipped his father and dealt Raymond a queen. The over-strained man thought at first glance the third card was a jack and there was a rattling noise in his dry throat. He wiped the dew from his face with the back of his hand. Emerson dealt himself a nine-spot and his father stopped him with out-stretched hand.

"You're Not in the Game"

"One moment!" he commanded. "Where's my card, Wilbur?"

"You're not in this game, father," replied young Emerson, brusquely, and made as if to deal again. But the outstretched hand stopped him again.

"I beg your pardon!" objected the old gentleman, with quiet dignity. He was now by far the coolest man in the room. "I am one of you!"

Emerson sighed excitedly and looked at his partners in appeal.

"We can't allow this!" he cried.

"I have shared the profits," said his father, firmly, "and I will share the losses! At least, I will preserve my self-respect! A card, please!"

His father silenced him with an imperious look and gesture.

"I invest! To leave me out would be an injustice to the others—and an insult to me!"

Emerson looked from one to another of his partners, seeking piteously for support. None of them would meet his eye and Raymond refused to support his contention. With old Emerson in the clamors would be no use against each of them instead of three to one—and they would not sacrifice that percentage out of chivalry.

For a moment Emerson seemed about to carry his point. In the face of the opposition of all four. Then suddenly, as if a fresh idea had struck him, he sank into his chair and passed the cards to Tooker.

"You deal them, Tooker!" he said. He leaned far over the table as Cooper's card fell. It was an eight-spot. As Tooker slipped his father's card off the deck he seemed to gather himself for some quick movement. It fell—a king. He sank back. Raymond's was a six, his own a nine and Tooker's a jack.

"Are there any jacks in this deck?" demanded Tooker, fingering the deck. He peered over another king. Two slipped off as he dropped the next card in front of Mr. Emerson.

"By God, the Jack of Spades!" gasped Raymond, springing up.

So quickly that the eye could barely follow, Tooker had struck the old man's hand onto his own pile and turned the other two that had fallen off, face up, slapping one down in front of his father and the other in front of Raymond.

Old Mr. Emerson, sitting with eyes closed as the deal approached him, did not see the quick shift of the cards. But Raymond did.

"That was all right," protested Raymond, excitedly.

Young Emerson kicked his chair over and sprang to his feet, the cards clutched in his fingers. His face quivered with passion.

"By God! it was not all right!" he shouted. "D'you think I don't know what I am doing? He clutched the cards across the table and they settled to the floor in a whirl of red and white.

"The game is closed! And the medicine ball is mine!"

KNIGHTS IN AUTO CONTEST BOARD

By J. C. KERRISON.

Harry W. Knights of Boston has been honored with an appointment by Chairman S. M. Butler as a member of the executive committee of the contest board, representing the American Automobile Association and the Manufacturers' Contest Association.

This is the first time since the alliance between these two organizations that New England has ever been favored by a member on the executive board, and in the selection of Mr. Knights, the authorities pay well deserved tribute and grant a well-earned promotion to one who has for several years labored in the ranks.

The appointment gives Mr. Knights the executive jurisdiction over New England and carries with it the appointment as a State representative of the contest board.

Mr. Knights has for several years been closely identified with motor contests in this section of the country, as well as having officiated as an official at many of the leading contests of America. He was the referee of the Boston AMERICAN motor vehicle contest of last October, and his capable work in that position did much towards making the test the thorough success it proved.

Mr. Knights is vice-president of the Bay State Automobile Association, having been vitally interested in that association since its organization many years ago. This honor came to him unsought, for which reason it is, unquestionably, doubly welcome.

* * *

Arthur A. Jervis, one of the best known automobile newspaper men in America, passed away in New York city on Monday last. Mr. Jervis has been ill from a severe attack of pneumonia, which he contracted during the big New York automobile show in Madison Square Garden, and his death came as a shock to all men who knew him so well.

Mr. Jervis was considered as one of the brightest, keenest, capable and most liked of men in the newspaper world in America. Some of the finest articles on automobiling and cycling have emanated from his pen. He was thoroughly master of the English language; a wide-minded man, ever ready and willing to do what he could towards assisting his fellows, and his heart was as big as himself.

Mr. Jervis has been in the newspaper work for two score years, having for the greater part of that time been connected with one of the New York dailies, as well as contributing to many of the leading periodicals. The last two or three years he has been identified with the American Locomotive Company, having handled all their publicity, pleasant and unpleasant, as many of its companies.

Mr. Jervis' death removes from the field of motor one of the brightest figures, leaving a void which it will be difficult to fill.

The Kissel Kar truck, which nonplussed even the cool of fortitude of those visiting the recent show in New York city, and which is to be delivered to the Universal Motor Company within the next ten days, arrived here yesterday. Harry Stratton, local manager of the Kissel Kar Company, has made arrangements so that he may display the truck on the next day or so before delivering it to its owners. The truck is designed along well accepted lines and contains only those features which by years of actual work have been determined to be of the best acceptable for commercial vehicles.

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—William C. Brown, president of the New York Central, has announced that his road's steel rail orders for the year have been closed. SALARY INCREASE FOR 3 BOSTON MEN

WASHINGTON, Jan. 25.—The librarian of Congress, Herbert Putnam, formerly of the Boston Public Library, is given a salary of $6,000 in the legislative appropriation bill reported to the Senate. No action has been taken, but it is said the usual custom followed in such cases is to send the nomination of a successor to the Senate. Mr. Beattie's removal would be accomplished by the confirmation of his successor.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

WALL STREET TREND UPWARD

NEW YORK, Jan. 25.—Activity prevailed all during the early trading in Wall Street to-day, with the result that practically the entire list moved up fractionally. Standard railroad stocks were leaders in the upward movement, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and St. Paul showing substantial gains.

Reading, which opened active and higher, shaded off during the first half hour. The new city bonds, which, when issued, sold at 104 as compared with the high price of 101¾, were one of the prime factors in holding the entire market down to fractions.

Steel was firm and higher. Consolidated moved up fractionally on announcement that directors would meet shortly to declare dividends. American opened fractionally higher and continued active on the longer exchange. The curb was active and slightly higher.

We have made arrangements whereby any reader of this paper can secure a fine new Upright Piano of almost any of the best well-known makes at a price that is lower than ever before quoted by any Piano House. The pianos will be sold on what we call our "American Plan," which enables any responsible man or woman who will set aside a few pennies a day to secure a piano at once. No waiting and no large payments down. Ample provision made in our "American Plan" against sickness, loss of work, etc. We have investigated and closely examined every "easy term" plan of selling pianos on credit that is being operated in Boston and New England, and none of them can be compared to our American Plan. There is no home that cannot have a fine piano. Get some member of the family to sign and mail to us today the coupon under the picture, and we will send information that will surprise you. How we do it and why we do it told plainly and honestly.

Are You Depriving YOUR Children of a Musical Education?

If you are you'll surely regret it some day. Your girl or boy may have slumbering somewhere in the soul the spark of genius. Who knows? Remember that almost all the great composers were in their childhood days without advantages—and it remained for some intelligent person to assist them and help in the development of that musical genius that has for centuries delighted and educated the whole world.

IF YOUR NEIGHBOR'S CHILD HAS A PIANO WHY SHOULDN'T YOURS HAVE ONE?

Say to yourself—"Yes, My Child shall have the advantages that I, as an American citizen, am to-day able, and easily able, to give her."—Fill out this coupon today—Don't wait.

Your Daughter Should Have the Same Advantages as the Girl in the Picture.

The American Home Is Not Complete Without a Piano

WE MAKE IT EASY FOR YOU TO GET ONE.

Have a nice piano in your home at once. Don't wait any longer. You know very well that you cannot say that your home is properly furnished unless you have a piano. Every up-to-date home has a piano, both for the fine finish it gives the room and for the great pleasure and entertainment it affords you and your friends. Imagine trying to entertain your friends, who like music and song, without a piano in the house. Be up-to-date. Get a piano. We have all the best makes in our "American Plan"

An Outrage Upon the Taxpayers of the Nation

The pension bill that was driven through the House of Representatives last week by the Cannon organization is an insufferable outrage upon a patient, generous and overburdened people.

It should be stopped in the Senate by a blast of public indignation.

There is no possible question of the gratitude of the American people to those who have risked their lives in defence of the Government.

That gratitude has been proved by half a century of pension administration, so ample, so magnificent, that it has no parallel or precedent in the annals of the world.

Good measure, pressed down and running over, the Government has poured into the laps of its defenders.

The time has come to call a halt.

Just pensions strengthen the nation, but public largesses debilitate it.

To add now forty-five or fifty millions to the annual charges of the pension roll is to loot the Treasury and put honest soldiers to shame.

That the line between liberality and largess has already been passed is evident from the fact that the further we get from the great war of the sixties the larger grows the roll of its pensioners and the greater the volume of public expenditure on that account.

In 1870 there were 198,686 pensioners. In 1890 the number was 537,944. And in 1910 there were 921,083.

In 1870 the total amount paid for pensions was $29,351,488. Twenty years later it was $106,093,850. And forty years later $159,974,056.

It is as if pensions were living things, that grew by what they fed on!

Meanwhile the burden of public taxation has become nearly unbearable.

Billion-dollar Congresses have given way to two-billion-dollar Congresses.

Upon an extortionate tariff all sorts of taxes, direct and indirect, are piled. A sweeping corporation tax has been levied, and an income tax is imperatively required.

This is the day for more economy and less taxation.

We must stop the riot of pension extravagances.

What is spent in excess pensions would build a navy that would make us forever secure from possible attack—would fortify the Panama Canal—would restore our vanished merchant marine—would completely develop our inland waterways and entirely redeem our arid lands.

If we stop the pension waste we can have a country securely protected and immensely developed in ways that will add to the organs of our prosperity gigantic wealth-producing improvements—and hundreds of millions of actual wealth.

In place of the orgy of waste, we should now substitute a policy of intelligent financial administration and prudent public expenditure.

The greatest business institution in the world is the United States Government.

It should be put on a business basis.

It Is Proposed to Abolish the Sending of Telegrams by Telephone Message

Copyright, 1911, by American Journal-Examiner

It is possible now to send a telegram anywhere in the United States or in the world by calling telephone headquarters and dictating the telegram over the telephone. This means time saving, labor saving, which is to say, that it means higher efficiency, higher civilization.

Because there has been some difficulty with the sending of such telegrams; because some servant girl is alleged to have received and read a telegram not intended for her unholy eyes, and because the telephone and the telegraph company might be sued by dissatisfied senders of telegrams, it is proposed to abolish the combination of the telephone and the telegraph wires.

This proposal is foolish, reactionary and unworthy of a sensible man. If a telegraph message can be sent over the telephone wire, making needless the sending of a little boy late at night through the cold and the wet, why, in the name of goodness, not use the telephone, and save the time and the needless effort?

Let it be understood that those who thus send telegrams over the telephone wire do so at their own risk, and are willing to abide by that risk. The combination of telegraph and telephone is a great public service. It is also a great and dangerous monopoly, one that will inevitably lead, if unchecked, to extortion and a vast unhealthy accumulation of wealth.

But, this combination is in line with the great work of organization, of concentration, and of simplifying, and it must go on.

Let us hope that the time will come when human beings will know enough to take and manage for themselves, paying fair compensation to the present owners, such self-evident monopolies and public necessities, as telephone and telegraph wires.

And in the meanwhile, no going backward, no useless night work for little messenger boys, no useless sending of messengers by business men, when the telephone wires can be made messengers everywhere.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

CHARACTER OF GOD

Editor AMERICAN:

Your recent editorial headed "Study the Character of God" plainly showed that, as man's mental and moral standards have improved, his conception of God has likewise correspondingly improved. You rightly suggest that a study of astronomy—of the universe—will so broaden men's minds as to give them a wider, nobler, grander conception of the illimitable immensity of which they are such a very insignificant part. And, as no human God must who best serves his fellowmen—thus best answering the "purpose" of his creation—meekness is the supreme test of righteousness.

Worse than wasted is that time devoted to empty words, forms and ceremonies and selfishly designed thereby to humor, wheedle or flatter a just, unchangeable God into remitting a just punishment for our self-condemned wrongdoing. Let us educate better.

A TERROR TO GRAFTERS

Editor AMERICAN:

Mr. W. R. Hearst is the greatest, the most powerful, the most fearless political reformer the world has ever known. With his line of giant newspapers stretching from Maine to California he is driving from office an army of political thieves, bribers, grafters and giving back to the people their rights. He and his able staff of editors, artists and writers are trailing down, like bloodhounds, the corrupt politicians, and scoundrels that have robbed and disgraced this country for years.

The American's Fight for Decency in Massachusetts

From the East Boston Free Press.

All honor to the AMERICAN for the honest, vigorous and emphatic manner in which it represented the interests of the people in the fight to defeat Henry Cabot Lodge. Never in this State were the people more in need of a powerful champion to espouse their cause against the corrupt influence of the special interests. There is no weapon so effective against the weakness, the treachery, the venality, or the downright corruption of the people's representatives at a critical moment than pitiless publicity. This was furnished by the AMERICAN so effectively in the recent contest for Lodge's seat, that there is no telling how many knaves quaked in their boots and remained straight for fear of having their crookedness made public.

The Hearst paper deserves the gratitude of the public for its efforts and its keen observation of all that went on in the fight. It was a powerful organ of public vigilance, and it performed its functions in a most masterly fashion.

As regards some of the methods employed to bring about Mr. Lodge's election, they are so well known and so emphatically condemned by all honest citizens that we will dismiss the subject with brief comment. We will only remark that it is pitiable to see so hardened a warrior as Mr. Lodge receiving his cruelest wounds when nature can so feebly assist in their healing, and that it is distressing to see the sanctity of his years unmoved by the acts of his campaign managers. It is deplorable to see the slime of gutter politics smeared upon the escutcheon of a man who at least has the full mental equipment of a statesman.

75,000 PEOPLE AGAINST LODGE

From the Lewiston Journal.

Senator Lodge, in an outburst of enthusiasm, hurries to wire to the Massachusetts Legislature his gratitude for his re-election. Incidentally, he thanks the people of Massachusetts, whom by a large majority the legislators misrepresent. As Massachusetts by 75,000 is opposed to Lodge, it cannot be true that the majority that elected him represent the Commonwealth. Lodge expressed his indebtedness to the Boston newspapers, who have been almost a unit against the progressive order of the last November ballot. The reactionary merger of the Boston newspapers has been long in evidence, but this merger has not modified public opinion nor answered the contentions of Governor Foss, whose election was due to his progressive views. Senator Lodge speaks of the complete disinterestedness embodied in the Bourbons of both parties who followed Whitney, Democrat, as well as Lodge, Republican. Doubtless, there would have been plenty more Bourbon Democrats to have voted for Lodge, had he needed more votes, and as matters stood two Democrats voted for him. Lodge must be proud of Curley. Lodge hopes he may be able to repay the Bourbons who have elected him—by service to the country, presumably, regarding his past service to High Finance as service to the nation.

"CHARGES OF CORRUPTION"

From the Fitchburg Sentinel.

It seems inevitable that there should be charges of corruption in connection with this affair. They have been floating about the State House, with specification, and some of them are of a nature to demand attention. But it is notorious that such matters are particularly difficult to verify and nothing has been brought to the attention of the Legislature which demands investigation. Just as soon as any man is willing to stand responsible for a statement of fact, and make it seem that the Legislature ought to take up the matter, there is no doubt that the thing will be done. But there is no present reason to believe that anything will be done.

A DEGREE OF HUMILIATION.

From the Worcester Gazette.

To be forced to plead openly with a horde of plebeian politicians for their aid that his laurels might not be taken from him, was surely enough to breed some degree of humiliation in one possessing Mr. Lodge's lofty patrician ideas. It was the political machine he mastered and the whippers-in he deftly directed that saved the day for Mr. Lodge. His record made did not do it. Mr. Lodge knows, and everybody else must be convinced, that had his return depended upon the voters of the Commonwealth his career as Senator would have ended forever next March.

AGENT OF THE "SPECIAL INTERESTS"

From the Lawrence Eagle.

Future historians will record the fact that for many years Massachusetts was a leader in the march of progress, but on January 18, 1911, she fell to the rear by re-electing Henry Cabot Lodge, politician from Nahant, to the United States Senate for a full term of six years. Lodge does not represent the people. He is recognized everywhere as the agent of the special interests which desire to shape legislation so that they will benefit at the expense of the great mass of the people.

LODGE'S GREAT STRENGTH

From the Providence Tribune.

When a man equipped for a profession of his own choosing and favored by a generous Providence goes to the post in the weakest field that has ever lined up in a senatorial race and wins by a scant head, to say of him that he is in touch with popular sentiment, that the people of Massachusetts, as a whole, without regard for political affiliations, are for him, sounds very much like a travesty on the English language.

SAME HERE!

From the New Bedford Times.

Senator Lodge thanks the people and the press. So far as we are concerned, we beg to assure him that he's entirely welcome to the little bit we tried to do for him.

NO WELCOME IN MONTANA

From the Fall River Herald.

Evidently it would not be healthy for those two Democrats who voted for Lodge to take a trip to Montana just about now.

VOTE BUYING A PASTIME

From the Pittsfield Eagle.

Vote buying, both in elections by the people and by Legislatures, seems to be a mere pastime.

NOT "DESIRABLE"

From the Lawrence Telegram.

Lodge won by all that was necessary, though not by all that was desirable, perhaps.

Sated

By BERTON BRALEY

(An Agonized Protest from One of the Public.)

ALTHOUGH I'm very fond of art
And pictures that are sweet,
Although I always lose my heart
To every miss I meet,
I got into a roaring rage,
My head with anger whirls,
At finding on each cover page
Those everlasting Girls!

They simper forth in every pose
And every style of dress,
In blue and lavender and rose;
Their constant comeliness
Has got upon my frazzled nerves;
I hate their smiles and curls,
I hate their angles and their curves,
I'M sick to death of Girls.

On papers, books and corset ads.,
On posters on the fence,
On packages of liver pads,
On bottles filled with scents,
These pictured misses meet my gaze
(Red lips and teeth like pearls)
Until I cry out in a daze,
"Deliver me from Girls!"

Oh editors and artist folk,
And advertisers too,
This fad has ceased to be a joke—
Please give us something new.
We may be unaesthetic guys,
Mere Hooligans and churls,
But let us put you fully wise—
We've had enough of Girls!

When the Dress Doesn't Fit

Every woman knows what a calamity this may be, but just watch out for Tom Powers' moving picture scream in the big City Life Section of next Sunday's AMERICAN.
